"October Gave a Party"

MADGE DEAR:

Do you remember the little song we children used to sing when our chestnut ting in late October?

October gave a party.
The leaves by hundreds came.
The chestnut, oak and maple
And leaves of every name.

The kiddies had an autumn-leaf party yesterday. From the woods they brought leaves of every hue: bright scarlet, brown, yellow and green.

We had a merry time wearing wreaths and garlands, singing songs and playing games.

Bess Hayes came over to help entertain the youngsters. She had on a nice, sensible gown of Havana-brown serge braided with black soutache. It was made with a sailor collar which formed deep square revers in front. Braiding ran about the edge. The skirt was cut plain, excepting for the front panel, which opened from the knees and was held in place by a square buttoned tab. The cuffs of the half-length sleeves showed the same trimming.

Mildred wore a cunning little frock of white serge, made with three box-pleats in front and also in the back, which fell straight from the shoulders. Fancy blue silk formed the broad shawl sailor collar, which had around it a frill of white embroidery. Cuffs were the same, and a black patent leather belt was worn about her waist.

Jennie's mother always dresses her in the most becoming and stylish clothes. She wore a one-piece frock of pumpkin-yellow linen. Collar, cuffs and skirt border were of eyelet embroidery on the linen, and under the arms was set a panel of this attractive work. A soft black silk sash was run through straps of linen and knotted loosely in front. A Spanish note was given the costume by bright scarlet ribbons on her dark-brown hair.

May's frock was pink-and-white plaid gingham, made with a deep V both front and back and trimmed with a graduated flounce of white embroidery. It was worn over a white guimpe with lace trimmings.

Nellie wore a dainty frock of buff challis, which was perfectly plain, the only trimming being a lace frill at neck and sleeves and little frills around the hem of the skirt.

My own precious baby was dressed in blue Lansdowne, made with short kimono sleeves and a round neck opening over a guimpe of fine white lawn.

It is made with a broad panel front trimmed with buttons. A belt of blue buttons over on the left side.

My gown? It was violet voile, cut with a surplice bodice showing a V front. The now fashionable one-sided effect is obtained by a band of cream-colored embroidery on the left side of the bodice, while the right side folds over the underblouse of tucked net and into the narrow girde. This is thick cord, covered with the material and knotted on the side, finishing with tasseled ends. The short kimono sleeves were bordered with embroidery and opened over a tucked undersleeve.

The party ended with a frolic and light refreshment, the kiddies begging me to have another party soon again. Let me hear from you very soon, dear.

Affectionately,

which the Italians suffered in that province. They paid no attention whatever to the advice and neither attempted to deprive Italy of a pretext for intervention nor put the province in a condition to resist attack. Instead, they led their country straight into the trap prepared for her, with the result that they completely lost the province of the Adriatic.

GRAND DUKE TO BE TAUGHT LESSON

Princess Henry of Pless Joins Forces With Her Sister.

House Shut to Westminster, With Everybody Else Invited.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.) (By CHESTER OVERTON.)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The beautiful Princess Henry of Pless has joined forces with her equally beautiful sister, the Duchess of Westminster, in a final and heroic attempt to bring the Duke to a realization of his ways.

The Prince and Princess have arranged an imperial house party which is to be given next month at Furstenstein in the Pless stronghold at which the Kaiser is to be a guest of honor. In the lists of invitations sent to the English continent of guests particular pains have been taken to include every member of the princess' family and kin.

The Duchess is going of course, so is her mother, Lady Cornwallis-West, and her daughter, Lady Ursula Grosvenor, and her friends, the Countess of Leicester and Lady Bridget Coke. But the Duke of Westminster is not invited. He has been distinctly and severely left out. The breach between the Duke and Duchess of Westminster is widening every month and were it not for pressure from high places she would long since have sought her remedy in the law courts. The Duchess is constantly humiliated by having to ask the members of her household as to the whereabouts of the duke, but this action of the allied sisters is evidently intended to make it clear to the world that his grace is not considered a member of that household by her highness the Princess of Pless.

The house party at Furstenstein is to include a brilliant battue for the Kaiser and it has been arranged that the various animals to be hunted will be so driven that the German emperor cannot fall to run up a big slaughter list.

WAS HUMBLE LABORER.

From the position of a humble day laborer in New Zealand to being the possessor of an annual income of $400,000, three hundred acres of land, an entire set of ancestral castles and six titles is the ending of a strange romance of the Earl of Seafield since the fling yesterday of the will of his granduncle, the dowager Countess of Seafield, who died a few weeks ago. His wife, the Countess, who thus out-Chinderella Cinderella by the change of her husband's fortunes was Miss Nina Grant, the daughter of a New Zealand doctor.

Although the Earl got his titles as long ago as 1898, they availed him nothing and he has been practically penniless, living in Ireland on a modest allowance. His father, who held the titles for only a few months, was a court bailiff in Oamaru, New Zealand and his mother was a Salvation Army lassie. The Earl is now 35 years old. His name is Sir James Ogilvie Grant and in addition to the Earl of Seafield he is Viscount Reidhaven, Baron Ogilvie of Deskford and Cullen, and Baron Strathpey of Strathpey. But his proudest title of all is Lord of Grant, which means that he is head of the famous clan of Grant which has held sway in Scotland for hundreds of years.

The fact that during recent years the Earl has been numbered among England's landless peers is because when the eighth earl died leaving no children all the property reverted to the late Dowager Countess. The next male descendant, her nephew, was then discovered in New Zealand, utterly ignorant of his estate and he died a few months after ascending to the title.

COMING TO UNITED STATES.

His many friends in America will be glad to hear that Baron Adolph De Meyer will sail for New York at the end of this month and that he will spend a month or so weeks on the other side, apart from his desire to see his own friends the Baron will aim to acquaint himself with all the latest developments in American photography.

Although famous as the most artistic amateur photographer in the country, Baron has always been rather overshadowed by his beautiful wife, who before her marriage was Olga Witte, however, as was her late mother, whose friendship many years ago with the late King Edward is one of those open secrets of which there are so many at court.

ITALIANS HAVE LAUNCHED ANOTHER DREADNOUGHT

GENOA, Oct. 21.—Italy's third super-dreadnaught, the Leonardo da Vinci, was successfully launched here.

The Leonardo da Vinci, which is a sister ship of the Conte di Cavour and the Giulio Cesare, has a displacement of 21,500 tons. Her length over all is 575½ feet, beam 91½ feet and mean draft 27½ feet. The vessel carries thirteen 12-inch main guns, three 8-inch secondary guns, five 6-inch anti-aircraft guns, and two 4-inch anti-aircraft guns. Her second battery, to stand off torpedo attack, will be made up of eighteen 4.7 inch rifles. The engines of the Leonardo da Vinci are of 24,000 horsepower and are expected to attain a trial speed of 22.5 knots.

PROPERTY IS HELD AT $10,000,000 AN ACRE

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Speaking at the Mansion House recently, after receiving the delegates of the joint congress of the British Archeological Society, the Lord Mayor (Sir T. Vesey Styring) said the present surroundings of Crosby Hall at Chelsea were not so harmonious as were its original surroundings in the city.

But when they found that ground was valued at $10,000,000 an acre in the case of the sites, then he thought they would realize that in itself presented a difficulty which even the enthusiasm of archaeological associations and their love of art found it extremely difficult to resist.

PRINCE, VICTIM OF ANTI-FAT DIETING

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.) (By COUNT VON ELPHBERG.)

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—The royal house of Bavaria and many friends of Miss Maude Fay, of San Francisco, are plunged in mourning because of the death, said to be by dieting, of her fiancé, Prince Luitpold of Oettingen. The Prince's death is ascribed to his heroic efforts to reduce his overabundant weight.

It is averred that he had learned from his fiancée, who is herself quite averse, that American women make and keep themselves thin by a course of medicinal treatment. He consulted a physician, but the treatment prescribed was too severe, although during its progress, the prince used to say that he, as an officer of the heavy cavalry, should be able to stand as much as any American woman. But alas, he was not, and after months of suffering, the big cavalry officer died.

EVIDENCE OF SUICIDE.

The schoolboy duel with its attendant double tragedy, which has just shocked Germany, is ascribed to the fact that both lads were students of pessimistic and cynical literature and devoted admirers of Nietzsche and Oscar Wilde. The theory is now advanced that their duel was merely a blind to hide a carefully planned double suicide.

Indeed, schoolboy suicides are becoming almost epidemic in Germany and the suicide of a boy of 14 and a murder by a boy of 11 are reported simultaneously with the foregoing tragedy.

Comparison of American with German universities occupied much attention at the recent annual meeting of the German Professors' association, held at Dresden. Professor George Fullerton of Columbia called attention to the freedom of instruction in the American university and declared that American professors were free to express their opinion on all subjects.

The Berlin royal society this week held a lively discussion over the American proposal for an arbitration treaty with Germany. Professor Von Tartz, a famous international law authority, who represented Germany at the Hague conference, opposed the agreement and declared the American treaties with France and England did not contain the "honor clause" which that treaty without it would in critical times fail to please.

Von Tartz opposed the agreement on the further ground that the final decision on arbitration would be left to the United States Senate.

Professor Von Listz of the Berlin University, argued in favor of the treaty.

The late Maharajah of Cooh had four sons and three daughters. The eldest boy, known prior to his succession as Prince Raj Rajendra Narayan, was educated at Eton, and has recently shared the work of administration with his father. The portrait on the right is of the Princess Sudhina of Cooh Behar.

Mr. and Mrs. Albu's week-end house party at Knebworth House, Knebworth, indicates that the season of the country house week-end party is in full swing. On this page we give some pictures of the party at Knebworth House. The pictures show (1) a group of Mr. and Mrs. Albu's guests at their charming house—these included Her Serene Highness Countess Leiningen, His Excellency the Bulgarian minister and Madame de Tzolkow, Sir Robert and Miss Lucas Tooth, and the Hon. Millicent Blyth; in (2) Mrs. Albu, who is a very fine fencer, prepares for a bout with the foils; in (3) she fences with the Bulgarian minister; in (4) she plays tennis against (5) the Hon. At the end of September are held the great Michaelmas fairs at Leipzig and at Mayence. Either will give you opportunity of seeing the "gaiety of nations" as is understood by the intelligent foreigner.

At Mayence the good burghers give one better value for money than at Leipzig. The prices are smaller and the audience is less numerous. But hotels are better and prices are far less inflated, thus giving Mayence attractions of its own for the economist.

BURFORD PRIORY PUT UP FOR SALE

Thirteenth Century Relic, Restored by Colonel, May Be Bought.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Burford Priory, Oxfordshire, which dates back to the thirteenth century, is for sale. Some years ago Colonel de Sales La Terriere bought the estate and restored the priory, which was at that time almost a ruin.

The original buildings of the priory included a church. It passed through several hands until it was acquired by Sir Lawrence Tanfield, created chief baron of the exchequer by James I, who visited him. Charles II dined at the priory in 1681, and William III was also a visitor. After the death of Speaker Lenthall of the Long Parliament, who bought it from Lord Falkland, the property passed to his son, Sir John, who was known as "the grand braggadocio and liar of the age he lived in."

The most important interior features of the priory include Speaker Lenthall's chimney-piece in the drawing room, the ceiling of this room, which dates from the time of Henry VIII, the staircase, the gothic arched ceiling of the hall, the fireplace and the ceiling of the inner hall.

Close to the house is a typical piece of Jacobean garden architecture—one of two garden houses in the west wall. In the one now gone was discovered the body of "John Prior, gent., murdered and found hidden in the priory garden." He was steward to the Lenthalls, and the murder was publicly ascribed to the fifth earl of Abercorn, who married in 1702 the widow of William, son of Sir John Lenthall. His fellow peers, however, acquitted him, and a gardener was hung. The announcement of the sale has been made by Messrs. Wilson and Gray, auctioneers, of London and Yeovil.

Elopement Epidemic Stirs Up Restaurant Row of Happy Paris.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.) (By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.)

PARIS, Oct. 21.—There is uproarious fun among the smart set over a brilliant encounter between Miss Marjorie Patterson of Baltimore and Harry Lehr at the Ritz Hotel last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Lehr were entertaining Grand Duke Boris at dinner and Miss Patterson was a guest of some friends at a neighboring table. Miss Patterson belongs to the family of Betsy Patterson, who married Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon I and sometimes Emperor of Westphalia. Miss Patterson, who has had dramatic as well as literary aspirations, is an author of note and is now engaged on a book to be called "The Dust of the Road." Her mother has been on very friendly terms with the Lehrs, so much so that she said to Miss Patterson, "whenever you see Mrs. Lehr, go and speak to her."

Following this maternal advice, the young authoress went over to the Lehr table. Her reception was as cold as charity. Eyebrows were arched and stony stares were given. Later in the evening, Lehr sought out Miss Patterson and said:

"We are sorry to have received you so coldly," but you know when we are dining with royalty, it is not etiquette to speak to anyone else. What was the Grand Duke Boris who was our guest?"

"I don't care if he were the Grand Duke Alexis," said Miss Patterson.

"But you leaned on the back of his chair," continued Mr. Lehr, in a groined voice.

SHE DIDN'T MIND.

"I'm sure I did not mind if he didn't," said Miss Patterson. In truth the Grand Duke was delighted and when he had said goodbye to the Lehrs he sought an introduction to the bright girl from Baltimore.

The American colony in Paris were startled this morning by the announcement that Mrs. Philip Cavendish and George P. Smith, an engaged couple, Mrs. Cavendish is the widow of Thurston Hilton Cavendish of the British royal engineers. George P. Smith is a nephew of the late William Henry Smith, known as "Silent Smith," who married Mrs. Rhineland Stewart of Philadelphia, the mother of the Duchess of Vizeu. He is also a nephew of Lady Cooper of London.

Smith has been justifying his claims to the inheritance of part of his father's great fortune by the reckless and spectacular manner in which he spent money. He and C. Harold Anthony of Chicago, having done Paris to a turn, were starting for fresh fields, when he met Mrs. Cavendish. The latter, who is the widow of the classical restaurant, Volain, on the corner of the Rue Saint Honore and the Rue Cambon. Madame Bracquas was nearing the half century mark when she permitted herself to be carried off by a headless youth of 20. It is a great pity that the opportunity as the owner of the Volain and their family who own the Bouffé La Mode restaurant are the aristocracy of the trade and have been intermarrying for 150 years.

EPIDEMIC BREAKS OUT.

An epidemic of elopements has broken out among the wives of restaurant-keepers and victuallers in the Quarter Maderline. The first to start off with a younger and handsomer man was Madame Bracquas, who was the proprietor of the classical restaurant, Volain, on the corner of the Rue Saint Honore and the Rue Cambon. Madame Bracquas was nearing the half century mark when she permitted herself to be carried off by a headless youth of 20. It is a great pity that the opportunity as the owner of the Volain and their family who own the Bouffé La Mode restaurant are the aristocracy of the trade and have been intermarrying for 150 years.

DIAMOND HER FAVORITE.

It seems that the divine Mary's favorite stone is the diamond and on a recent visit to America, admirers of her talent gave her some precious gems. Miss Garden then claimed that their clear, cold sparkles conduce to ethical culture and shames them in the hands of the vulgar. The wife of a butcher who supplies Baron Alphonse Rothschild with meat has eloped with the Baron's chief butler and the wife of a restaurant keeper at the back of the hotel Bristol, who is the mother of five children has skipped away with a Russian prince.

But Secretary Chaumery having had occasion to call upon Messenger and Carré in the interests of his employer, it is said that some of the diamonds presented by American admirers of the singer's talent were re-organized in the rings and scarf pins of Secretary Chaumery. Manager Messenger immediately began to discover unusual sweetness in the notes of a Russian grand opera singer and Albert Carré thinks his own wife's good looks have improved since her recent tour in South America.

Rigny, a Normandy landlord, is said to have paid the penalty for reducing his wife's allowance and for "working his eldest son too hard." It is said that a confession has been wrung from his 13-year-old son, who is said to have told the police: "My mother and I hid ourselves behind a hedge along a road which we knew my father would take, and I shot at him when he was about two yards away from us." When the Baron was shot it is alleged that the baroness asked her son, "Is it done?" and added, "All the better" when he said yes.

CONNAUGHT IS READY TO WORK

"Royal Highness" Is Far From
That in the Energy Displayed.

Family Popular and Freedom From "Side" Will Please.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The Duke of Connaught has often found his "royal highness-ship" a hindrance, for he is above all things a soldier—an energetic man, who detests anything in the nature of an ornamental job.

The duke's great opportunity came when he went to South Africa last year to open the first parliament of the union, and he took hold of it with both hands. From the first he made friends by his simple, unaffected manner, with which just the right amount of royal dignity is combined and this was the secret of his success—not a complimentary success because of his blood, but a real success that helped knit the empire.

"He was always so human," said a friend to me the other day—a friend who was in Africa with him. "He used to look as if he really liked laying foundation stones. And even the dusty business of receiving addresses did not bore him. He must have had dozens presented to him, yet he always looked interested, and I more than half believe he was, though it sound incredible. When he spoke it was not the formal utterance of a representative of the king, but real live sentiment, spoken in a musical voice, and containing not seldom some arresting phrase that stuck in his hearers' minds."

OBJECTS TO "ROYAL HIGHNESS."

The duke dislikes being addressed as "Your royal highness." Some time ago a fussy colonel used this form of address on parade and the duke finally said:

"On military parade I am 'sir,' and nothing else."

Perhaps it is not generally known that the Duke of Connaught has an extraordinary influence over King George, who consults him on almost every subject of any importance. During the life of the late king the younger brother had practically no influence at all, and was in the background altogether. King Edward looked on him as "the good brother," and, I am told, was bored by having the duke continually called up to him as an example. It is well known that the duke chafed much against not being allowed to go out to South Africa during the Boer war. But Queen Victoria was adamant, no doubt doubly determined on the point as she had already lost one son in the Ashanti war.

The Duchess of Connaught, though not of such a simple nature as her husband, will get on well in Canada. She is the daughter of a great German prince and is always much on her dignity. She found things difficult here, but in Canada there will be no question of precedence, so her greatest trouble here will be over. She is, however, one of the shrewdest women in the world, and the late king, Princess Patricia, told how on one of their foreign tours she almost had to push her mother into the room for the reception.

PRINCESS PATRICIA POPULAR.

There is no shyness about Princess Patricia. A more charming girl it would be hard to find anywhere. She is the lucky possessor of a sunny disposition and always becomes immensely popular wherever she goes. She is fond of all outdoor amusements, rides well and is quite a clever water color artist, and of course a fine linguist. A rare quality possessed by this interesting princess is that called "old force," a power which tells its owner when he or she is being uncut and semi-precious stones of which she has quite a large number of considerable value.

She is quite "unprincessy" in ways and looks. She has gone about lately in a motor car, and in fact King Edward thought she ought to have a lady in waiting of her own, on account of her independence, and her taste for going about incognito on the tops of omnibuses. She has a hairdresser of all over the world, and being quick to imbibing new ideas, is unusually broad minded. In fact, an entire absence of "side" from all the three members of this good looking Connaught family should have their quick popularity among the people of Canada.

TREASURE-HUNTERS RECOVER $100,000 FROM OCEAN

LONDON, Oct. 21.—It is considered likely that a great addition to the world's stock of gold will soon be made and this by one of those romantic searches for treasure which so rarely prove profitable.

The British warship Ludwig was wrecked off the island of Villand on October 9, 1909. The Ludwig was on its way to Hamburg, freighted with gold and silver bars and coins to the total value of $1,200,000. Up to the present time over $100,000 has been taken from the wreck.

Last year the National Salvage Association decided to send a powerful salvage steamer to remove thirty-six feet of sand which then covered the Ludwig. Considerable success attended the efforts. The sand on the outside and inside of the vessel has been removed, and divers can walk along the lower hold.

Forward amidships there are about 150 tons of iron ballast. When the after part of the vessel collapsed, cannon-balls, timber and powder fell into the gold and silver bars, burying them. It was found necessary to use dynamite in the removal of the cannon-balls, and, in the middle of September, several charges were used with excellent results.

Two tons of cannon-balls have been removed. At each tier was taken away, more and more coins were found, indicating that the treasure lies under this mass of iron which, owing to the action of the water, has become solid. Recently gold was taken from a piece of rusty iron.

MISS NANCY DENVERS.

About Those Pictured

MISS NANCY DENVERS has been appearing with great success at the Garrick theater as the dancing girl in "Kismet."

MILE. WERNER, who has undertaken to train English girls in the gentle art of dress at Marble Arch house, is a Parisian thoroughly imbued with the artistic spirit of her country—women in all matters sartorial. She has opened classes to teach English women how to make, how to wear their clothes, and how to get the proper value for their money when they buy. French women spend far less than their English sisters on their clothes.

LADY DESBOROUGH, who is co-heiress to the Barony of Butler was a Miss Ethel Fane before her marriage. She and her famous sportsman husband are the parents of three stalwart sons and two daughters. Their fine home, Taplow Court, is, perhaps, the best known house on the river.

MISS EVELYN D'ALROY plays Brenda Carlyn in "The Hope," Love and villainy, heroism and matrimony composed the autumn melodrama at Old Drury. Poverty in marble halls debars the hero and the heroine from marrying and many adventures on land and sea (including seismic convulsions) prevent their happy union till the last act. Yet, thanks to the hero winning the Derby, and the heroine winning the first prize in the Calcutta Sweepstake, everybody is made happy, villainy is frustrated, and the audience is sent home in a good temper.

BALFOUR HAS FEARS FOR UNITY FO BRITAIN

HADDINGTON, Scotland, Oct. 21.—A. J. Balfour fired the first gun in Conservative opposition to what may be termed the second act of "the revolution" before an immense meeting of the Unionist association.

Strong factional opposition to his leadership, which was kindled by his advice to the lords to accept the veto bill, has accused him particularly of weakness on the tariff reform issue, and his announcement on this point was important. He came out strongly for imperial preference. "I hope," said Mr. Balfour, "that our people will find the spirit in which we must approach this question in the broad decision reached by the Canadian people. The Canadian decision extended far beyond the borders of Canada, and must have beneficial results for the empire at large. The decision of Canada shows how impossible it is to maintain the present system of things."

"Our colonies are not believers in the system spoken of as free trade. Unless this country meets the situation we will have Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other great communities making their separate commercial tariffs with our countries. This country will awaken some fine morning to find that these great communities, loyal as they are, have instituted a system of tariffs in which we find ourselves at a disadvantage. Such a state of affairs must have a fatal effect upon the unity of the British empire."

England's Dowager Queen Reported Aging Fast

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 21.—Two sisters have adorned the thrones of Great Britain and Russia, and their brother, the King of the Hellenes, are gathered here, their birthplace, their first home. The family party was made complete when Dowager Queen Alexandra arrived on the British royal yacht Victoria and Albert. Memories must crowd on the sisters of the days when their mother, Queen Louise of Denmark, who was rightly called "the greatest matchmaker the world ever saw," taught them to make their own gowns and bonnets.

Queen Alexandra, widow, mother and sister of a king, is looking old. The smile that "Normans and Saxons and Danes" so love is faded. She is clad still in deep mourning, and has let her wish be known that as little attention as possible be paid her in public. The queen has been cruising on the Victoria and Albert in the Norwegian fjords. She is happy to report to her relatives that the reports of the recent revolt in the Norwegian army were much exaggerated and that King Haakon, who married her daughter, Princess Maud, is as popular as ever with his subjects.

CZAR'S ROOMS UNCHANGED.

The dowager czarina came on the Russian imperial yacht Polar Star a day or two ago. Her majesty entertained but little, although there are two bands of musicians on the yacht. She is pleased particularly by the classic music which the Ballalahe band discourses for her delectation.

The dowager czarina becomes more and more religious. She prays long each day in the bedroom on the yacht which was occupied by her husband, the late Czar Alexander III, whom an oil lamp burns day and night in what was the bedroom. "It is to keep away evil spirits," the Polar Star sailors say reverently. King George of Greece, whose reputation has improved with age, inherits much of his mother's ability and some of her thriftiness. In the earlier days he used to scatter money whenever he visited Paris inco, but his prodigality was always conducive to his own amusement. The king has been part of his time here examining the accounts of his Danish estates, which are paying very well. He is often seen on the streets and is most pleasing in rummaging the curio shops.

If his keen, educated eyes detect something worth having he knows how to drive a sharp bargain for it. As for his ability, it is enough to say that he will celebrate the golden jubilee of his reign. To have maintained himself for a half century on the oft-troubled throne of Greece proves his capacity, although it must be remembered that during that period half the rulers of Europe or their wives have been his relatives and, consequently, his supporters.

POLICE SWARM ABOUT.

As usual a swarm of Russian secret police hovers around to guard the dowager czarina. Indeed, she and Queen Alexandra are, in a sense, prisoners of the police. The royal ladies will remain on their yachts for a week longer, at least, before they take up their residence in Villa Revidore, which is made ready for them. In the interval the secret police will ransack the city and all Denmark for Russian, Finn and Polish terrorists. When the search is completed the chief of the secret agents will issue a "landing permit" to the women at whose beck and call he is supposed to be.

A Russian detective related to the Post-Dispatch correspondent an incident which illustrates the dread of assassination which possesses the Romanoffs and high nobility. During a state dinner recently a princess of the reigning house cried suddenly: "There! In the corner! A huge rat!" and in the corner of the vast room there was a big gray rat. Despite efforts to frighten it by persons who were afraid of it, the rat remained. Just as a guardsman was ordered to "remove" the rat the lord chamberlain foolishly remarked that the terrorists probably had inoculated the rat with the plague and turned it loose in the palace. The mere suggestion was enough to send the czar, his family, kinsmen and guests scurrying from the room. Servants put on masks and gloves and caught the rat and took it to the infirmary where sufferers from the plague are treated. After careful examination the surgeons derided the idea the rat had been inoculated. They have had it embalmed and call it laughingly, "the political rat."

MME. CURIE MAY BE MEMBER OF THE ACADEMY

PARIS, Oct. 21.—There is a great probability that Mme. Curie will soon be a member of the French Academy of Science, filling the vacancy left by the recent death of the celebrated chemist Troost. A year ago when Mme. Curie offered herself as a candidate and was defeated, the most opposition she encountered was due to the fact that the vacancy which she sought to fill was in the section of general science, and the majority of the academicians considered it more fitting that she should wait for a place in the chemistry section. She is now in Leyden, absorbed in experiments in radio-activity. It is likely that she will be loath to put herself forward again after the rejection last year. Her friends in Paris, however, are working hard to secure this honor for her and many go so far as to say that her epoch-making discoveries entitle her to be proposed for the Nobel prize this year. The only probable rival candidates for the Academy of Sciences are Achille Lebel of stereo-chemistry fame, Jean Perrin, Sorbonne professor, and Charles Morreaux, who are already members of the Academy of Medicine.

GERMAN COUNT FINDS SELF IN TIGHT FIX

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—One of the most sensational cases tried in Berlin for the last few years is proceeding in the Criminal Court. The central figure in the drama is Count Wolf Metternich, nephew of the German ambassador at London and a distant relation of the Emperor of Austria.

Count Metternich, it may be remembered, was a candidate for the hand of Anita Stewart, who ultimately married Dom Miguel Braganza.

Count Metternich is accused of having obtained money under false pretenses and the court is crowded daily with elegant society men and women, officers, etc., remotely connected with the case.

WITNESSES LEAVE THE COUNTRY.

A number of aristocratic witnesses have been subpoenaed and many of them have preferred to quit the country until the trial is over rather than figure as actors in the piece.

The details of the case shed much light on the habits of a certain portion of Berlin society. Count Metternich, who has been rescued repeatedly by relations from the clutches of money lenders, was ultimately left on his own resources, and a rich marriage was looked upon as his only hope. He actually was admitted into the house of one of the most important Berlin merchants as a suitor for his only daughter's hand.

On the strength of this prospect the count borrowed the money which is now being claimed. That there was a hope of the count's marrying Miss Dolly Pinkus, stepdaughter of Herr Wolf Wertheim, is denied.

HUNT FOR TITLE SHOCKS TOWN.

The details that have transpired regarding the devices resorted to in order to obtain a titled husband for Miss Pinkus will not bear reproducing. Suffice it to say they have even shocked the feelings of the not over-squeamish Berlin public. Count Metternich is now married to an Australian actress renowned for her beauty, Miss Claire Valentini. Should the count be acquitted he will be tried again in connection with an international gang of card sharpers who are now under lock and key in Berlin.

PLAN STREET BANKS FOR PARISIAN THRIFTY

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Oct. 21.—An interesting suggestion, which, if adopted, would have an important effect in the encouragement of thrift, is made by a Paris newspaper. It is suggested that automatic machines be placed in the street, and that the slots be arranged so as to receive either two sous or half a franc. The depositors, on inserting coins, would receive a printed receipt, and, of course, such receipts would be honored by the state when presented. In order to put the proposal into practice some little difficulty must be encountered. Unless the boxes were cleared at nightfall an excellent opportunity would present itself to Louvre and other thieves to exercise their genius.

WINTER EXPEDITION IS HEADED BY DEATH

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 21.—Two men belonging to a Spitzbergen winter expedition have arrived at Christiania after great suffering. Three members of the expedition died of starvation in February last, and the two who have now arrived in Christiania had long ago given themselves up for lost. They were without food and ammunition, and were on the point of starvation when the Arctic navigator, Nils Larsen, of Tromsø, found and rescued them.

AMAZONS ARE READY FOR BATTLE

British Suffragettes Organize Home Defense
Army.

Miss Ida Peplow, Athlete and Shot, Accuses Men of Cowardice.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Amazons of the local days and all other muscular heroines may be relegated to a back seat by a corps of doughty suffragettes in England. One of the favorite arguments against extension of suffrage to women is that women, being unable to bear arms, should not be allowed to vote upon questions which may bring about war. Many replies have been given to the argument, but a new one of astonishing kind was brought forward by a letter from Miss Ida Peplow, printed in the Standard, a London morning paper, which this week opened a special daily section entitled "Woman's Platform." Miss Peplow thus introduced herself:

"My age is 24 years and 7 months. I can ride, run, swim, drive a motor car and do all minor repairs and adjustments to a car or motorcycle, and can steer, sail or row a boat. At one of the largest schools for girls in England, where I spent five years, I was captain of the first 11 in cricket and won the mile race two years in succession."

FOR COMPULSORY ARMY SERVICE.

"I barred hockey, but I gained a gold and silver medal as the best and second best all round athlete in school. At different times I won first prizes for English literature and English modern history, political economy, German and French conversation, sick nursing and dressmaking. In my last year I was second best rifle shot in the school, and made one of a team of 12 which shot a close second in a match with the local rifle clubs."

In stating these facts she said she was not moved by vanity, but by a desire that the public should understand her character and personality in view of what she was about to propose. This was in brief a national compulsory military service. Miss Peplow's first suggestion as to how to bring about this consummation was to take a vow of celibacy for a period of five years, "or until such time as England shall be placed in a posture of defense commensurate with its wealth and responsibilities and worthy of its history."

STRIKE DECLARED ON MATERNITY.

Her ideas were shared by a number of women, mostly of her own age, with whom she had been in correspondence for months, and they had formed a sort of club, to carry out her ideas. Their declaration is:

"For us marriage implies motherhood. We are resolved we shall not be mothers of sons whose necks shall be bowed to the foreigner, because the bearing of arms is not a recognized duty of their manhood." This was but the first stage. Miss Peplow's second idea was even more startling. This was the formation of "a home defense army of women."

She asserts that England is not safe from invasion, because "the men of England are too cowardly or too fond of their own ease and pleasure to fit themselves for defending their country, and too greedy to pay specialists for doing it for them. The men of England do nothing, apparently. They are content to busy themselves with trifles while the nation drifts toward disaster."

WILLING TO FIGHT WITHOUT PAY.

Miss Harriet Fowler, who, like Miss Peplow, had been corresponding with a number of representative women, wrote: "I am sure that most of us believe it to be possible to form a home defense army of women, efficiently trained, whose cost to the state will be only that of arms and equipment. We demand no pay and not even the cost of our own food. We will be paid for the old volunteer grant. I hope soon to be in a position to publish the financial arrangements that are being made and the proposed details of the formation of an experimental battalion of 500 women. At present we wish the public to have time to get over its surprise and to consider the idea seriously, for we are in earnest. The honor of our country is as dear to us as our own."

Perhaps the funniest outcome of these proposals is suggested by a military writer on military and naval subjects of acknowledged competency, Fred T. Jane, seriously pointed out the advantages of the proposal.

APPROVES WOMEN AS WARRIORS.

Mr. Jane begins by saying: "The physical efficiency of many of our defenders is none too high and modern going women or women engaged in manual labor often are more physically fit than many steady country boys." His imagination revolts at the idea of women in the firing line, but there would be ample scope for her in guarding the lines of communication, scouting, etc. An organized force of women, according to Jane, could be even more usefully employed than men in quelling the war riots which would undoubtedly break out in case England got into hostilities.

Jane concludes with a serious commendation of the Amazon report as follows:

"From the male standpoint, the spectacle of Englishmen taking shelter behind petticoats is humiliating to a degree, but if the women of England have come to save watching football matches and chasing round after 'catch vote' philanthropists what alternative is there?"

LACE MAKING REVIVAL IS LED BY QUEEN

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

BRUSSELS, Oct. 21.—Queen Elizabeth, wife of the King of the Belgians, has just instigated the formation of a private company called La Dentelliere belge, whose business it will be to promote the revival of lace making, principally in Mechlin and Bruges; to restore the fashion of lace-wearing, and to provide for the exportation of Belgian lace to different parts of the world, especially South America. The king himself figures among the founders of this company, being represented on the board by his private secretary, M. Ingenbleek.

LESS CHOLERA IN ITALY.

CHIASSO, Switzerland, Oct. 21.—Cholera conditions in Italy show a notable decrease in every section of the kingdom, according to an official bulletin issued by the Italian government. During the first week of October there were 231 cases and 92 deaths, compared with 1300 cases and 418 deaths for the first week of September.

Buds of Season Begin to Bloom in Local Society, Writes Suzette

By SUZETTE

IT is a record year in the East for the debutante; for there are seventy-five bright young girls who are to have an elaborate coming-out this season. The names on the winter's list appear very early both in New York and Washington.

In Baltimore, the debutantes were announced six months ago, and their first formal meeting will be at the Bachelor's cotillion in December.

The Boston debutantes have already made their initial appearance. In Minneapolis they have a hostess club, which arranges all the formal part for the debutantes. The great feature of their ball each autumn has been the fifty matrons in line, and the debutantes standing near the matrons. This year no girl will receive with them, but all the first-season girls will be at the great reception. In San Francisco the debutantes will all be present at the first Greenway assembly on November 3.

MISS NELLIE ADAMS HAS "COMING-OUT."

The largest reception of the week was the coming-out "at home" given by Mrs. Frank Adams to formally introduce her daughter, Miss Nellie Adams.

If often happens when a young girl is kept steadily at school that she does not know very intimately many of the old-time friends of the family, and some of them she has probably not met at all. But when formal school-days are over, there is time to take up the charming friendships, which have meant so much to the older members of the family. And the old friends in their turn wish to meet the young daughter of a household in which for years they have had a kindly interest. And so it is that a reception for a debutante is always well attended, and that there is a certain enthusiasm about it not evident in other "at homes." Youth is always attractive; always lovely, and very few pictures in social life can compare with that of the young debutante in her pretty gown in the midst of a crowd of old friends, who bring happy thoughts and cordial greetings for her.

The debut of Miss Nellie Adams was an occasion of unusual interest, for her family has lived in Oakland since pioneer days. Her grandfather, the late Dr. Adams, was one of Oakland's best-known and earliest physicians, a man greatly beloved, of sterling character and wide influence. The old home in Clay street was always a center for many hospitable gatherings, and made a shining mark in the social evolution of earlier days.

His son, the late Dr. Frank Adams, took up his father's work and carried it on, and developed his own life work in a wonderful way—keeping the friendships of the old days and making new ones—until he became one of the best-known physicians in California. And so it happens that many lovely memories center around his young daughter, the friendships that brightened her father's life shining for her, too, and making her debut an occasion of very special interest.

THOSE IN THE RECEIVING LINE.

Mrs. Frank Adams has a most attractive home in Telegraph avenue, and one specially adapted to entertaining guests. It was most attractive yesterday, the beautiful decorations adding to delightful environment. The young girl of today makes her debut in the midst of a wealth of flowers. Her own family plan elaborate decorations and her friends send her wonderful flowers. Never have debutantes had so many flowers as this season. Miss Nellie Adams bids fair to be immensely popular, if one may judge by the lovely blossoms which found their way to her home, for orchids, lilies of the valley and American beauty roses represented tributes of affection for the family, as well as very loving thoughts for an exceedingly sweet young girl.

Mrs. Frank Adams and her daughter welcomed their guests in the large drawing-room, and they were assisted in receiving them by:

Mrs. Samuel Hubbard, Mrs. Samuel Hubbard, Jr., Mrs. Charles Hubbard, Mrs. T. B. Coghill, Mrs. John L. Howard, Mrs. Hayward Thomas, Mrs. Guy Earl, Mrs. Arthur Crellin, Mrs. Ross Browne, Mrs. Spencer Browne, Mrs. Charles Hoffman, Mrs. Charles Houghton, Mrs. George Jensen, Mrs. Roy McCabe, Mrs. R. McCormick, Mrs. W. O. Badgley, Mrs. Clarence Hare, Mrs. T. O. Crawford, Mrs. Donzell Stoney, Mrs. Leslie Oliver, Misses Florine Brown, Evelyn Brown, Dorothy Taft, Dorothy Taylor, Biva Moseley, Anita Crellin, Helen Bannan, Lella Kenney, Myra Hall, Winnie Jewett, Hazel Layman, Fay Fairbanks.

Among the many guests invited to the large "at home" were:

Mrs. J. A. Stanly, Mrs. Minor Goodall, Mrs. M. W. Kalis, Mrs. Thomas Knowles, Miss Elsie Schilling, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. R. G. Brown, Miss Florine Brown, Mrs. Everts, Miss Mollie Connors, Mrs. Seymour Hall, Mrs. Harry Gordon, Miss Hampton, Miss Minnie Dyer, Misses Earl, Mrs. Andrew Moseley, Mrs. H. C. Taft, Miss Chrissie Taft, Miss Dorothy Taft, Mrs. M. J. Layman, Mrs. Grace Hayden, Mrs. Newton Koser, Mrs. Vernon Waldron, Mrs. Harrison Clay, Mrs. T. C. Coogan, Miss May Coogan, Mrs. Edward Walsh, Mrs. Gordon Stulp, Mrs. J. R. Burnham, Mrs. Charles Parcells, Mrs. E. B. Braden, Miss Winifred Braden, Mrs. George De Golia, Mrs. Sam Bell Wakefield, Mrs. E. B. Beck, Miss Edith Beck, Mrs. Harry Knowles, Mrs. J. R. Scupham, Mrs. Alfred Eastland, Mrs. James W. McClure, Mrs. Pendleton, Miss Pendleton, Mrs. Edwin Taylor, Miss Margaret Dunn, Miss Mollie Dunn, Mrs. Charles Cotton, Mrs. Edwin Morrison, Mrs. Harrison Clay, Miss Emma Farrier, Miss Wilcox, Mrs. Welder, Mrs. Harry East Miller, Mrs. William Letts Oliver, Mrs. O. S. Orrick, Mrs. William Creed, Mrs. A. P. Brayton, Mrs. Sam Breck, Mrs. Thomas Olney Jr., Miss Horton.

The decorations were arranged with high effect making a fascinating background for the charming young debutante and her mother. And in the midst of many flowers, there shone out the picture of the late Dr. Frank Adams, to whom the thoughts of many old friends turned with true affection. Mrs. Adams was very beautifully gowned in gray messaline over which was draped rare black lace. Her daughter, Miss Nellie Adams, received with her mother, a charming young debutante, stunning, sweet unspoiled. She wore a beautiful gown in the palest yellow tones, very handsomely embroidered in silver. A Grecian band in her hair added to the effect of the dainty gown, and her flowers were orchids. The young girls have never looked so lovely, a perfect bevy of them, all in dainty gowns, with silver spangles, or silver embroidery, and many of them wore the dainty Juliet caps of pearls, so very becoming to young girls. In fact, the new styles are specially charming when worn by a fair young maid. Miss Dorothy Taft wore the gown she had on at her own debut a short time ago, and among other exceedingly handsome gowns were those worn by Miss Chrissie Taft, Miss Camille Adams, Miss Julia Leigh, Miss Deborah Dyer, Miss Bessie Latham, Miss George Creed, Miss Hazel Lay-mance, Miss Grace Layman, Miss Elizabeth Orrick, Miss Bessie Latham, Miss Mildred Boyne, and Miss Anita Crellin.

HOSTESS ASSISTED BY DAINTY GIRLS.

Many of these dainty girls assisted the hostess in the dining room, and here again one saw very exquisite decorations. The polished table made an admirable setting for lovely flowers, for quantities of beautiful roses, in charming color tones of pale pink. Mrs. Samuel Hubbard and Mrs. R. G. Brown presided at the table. Mrs. Brown was gowned in lavender brocade, with diamond ornaments, and Mrs. Samuel Hubbard is giving us all many lessons on how to grow old so gracefully that one seems to have achieved perennial youth. Mrs. A. P. Brayton is always one of the most clever guests at a tea, as she is also one of the best read. She was superbly gowned in a beautiful costume, a combination of lace and velvet, and in the costume were color tones of lavender, mauve and the new purples so modish in New York and Paris.

Mrs. T. B. Coghill looked extremely well, in a lovely gown of pale lavender brocade, the corsage embroidered in silver, and very beautifully trimmed in lace. Her ornaments were diamonds, one of them a very exquisite miniature set in diamonds. Mrs. Coghill looked like a very rare picture, very lovely and sweet.

Bright Mrs. Stanly, another much-loved matron who is always young, looked very well indeed in a handsome gown of black brocade silk, with rare black lace. Mrs. Stanly is so popular that she always has a reception quite on her own account.

Mrs. Harry East Miller wore a handsome New York gown in tones of cerise, the skirt veiled in lace, and set off with a sash in tones of cerise. A hat in the new shapes was trimmed in cerise and was very becoming to Mrs. Miller's brunette type.

Mrs. Harrison Clay wore a tailored gown of white serge, and Miss Valentine wore a handsome gown of black velvet.

Miss Jean Cliff was a very lovely study in pale green, with ornaments to match the color tones of the gown. Mrs. Arthur Crellin wore an elaborate gown of white satin, very exquisitely trimmed in lace and silver embroidery.

Mrs. Charles Houghton wore a gown in brilliant effects, a white satin gown with narrow train, with a drapery of cerise flowered brocade.

Miss Emma Farrier wore a handsome empire gown in apple green tones, with a hat of the same tones to match the gown.

Mrs. Edgar Stone wore a tailor gown, in dark tones, with superb ermine furs.

Mrs. J. R. Scupham was gowned in lavender, a very becoming hat matching the gown.

Miss Leslie Oliver, the very pretty young bride of the season, was in the receiving party. She is a very gracious young matron, and she was a most attractive study in a gown of white chiffon with white lace.

Mrs. George Jensen was also in white, the gown of white satin elaborately embroidered in silver.

Mrs. Thomas Olney Jr. wore a gown of black chiffon, draped over white satin. The skirt of the gown was trimmed in broad bands of beautiful lace, and the bodice showed an arrangement of the same lace.

Miss Chrissie Taft wore one of the most exquisite gowns at the reception. It was designed in pale blue tones, the skirt showing a lovely drape of lace, and the bodice embroidered in silver. She was a handsome and very stunning study.

A stringed orchestra, in the wide hall, played delightful music, and added to the brilliant scene. The drawing room was thronged during the hours of the tea, and there were representatives from most of the prominent families in Oakland. There will be many complimentary affairs.

MRS. HARRY ROLAND BUELL, who is active in social and club affairs.

for Miss Nellie Adams, whose debut was such a brilliant affair, for many friends are exceedingly fond of the sweet young girl, and would like to make her first season a most happy one.

SOCIAL SEASON WELL ON WAY.

The social season rolls fairly on its round carrying a succession of dances, receptions, bridge afternoons, teas, luncheons, and dinners. Everyone seems to be going somewhere every day and there is a certain cheerfulness in the air that is inspiring. There have been more large teas than usual this winter, the tea marking the debut of the sweet young maid, whose formal school days are over. It is true, the doors of one school-room are closed forever, and the little bright maid is in a wider world, which everyone tries to make very happy for her just at first.

Bridge games are coming to the fore as the season advances, and "Auction" is having a far wider vogue than was at first anticipated. It is the game now played in Oakland, though Berkeley still clings to "straight bridge." But after you have played "Auction" a while, straight bridge seems like ancient history. But whatever one's feelings are, one must play "Auction," for the good players all know the game, and one is sure to be at a table where the other players insist upon "Auction."

Evolution goes slowly, and it took us a long time to move in from whist to bridge. We had to fairly pull some of our best players along, they seemed so sure to fall by the wayside. Now that they play a fine game of bridge, they want to play it forever, in spite of the fact that some of us are blissfully dealing out our cards to auction measures. Bridge—auction bridge—is the quiet universal game now. Robert Hichens' new story—his great tragedy moves on against a background of bridge, and one of his thrilling chapters is where his heroine, Dolores, wins the great bridge tournament, and carries off the beautiful pendant, an emerald, set in jade.

It is amusing to see the ethical standards established by many women who play bridge. If their consciences trouble them, one wonders why they play bridge at all. Life is a game all along the line, and one wins or loses according to the cards one holds, and the skill with which they are played.

Health and Beauty Queries

By MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. M. D.: For short, thin hair there is nothing better to promote a healthy, vigorous growth than a good quinine tonic. But do not trust to any prepared tonic that may have been made so long as to have lost its strength. Get from your drug store an ounce of quinine and a half pint alcohol; mix together, then add a half pint cold water. Massage this tonic into your scalp about twice a week; it will cause dandruff and scalp irritation to disappear as if by magic, and you will soon notice your hair getting longer, thicker and beautifully lustrous. This splendid tonic is a positive remedy for falling hair.

Miss R.: You will find the following lotion a splendid skin-whitener and complexion beautifier: Dissolve four ounces of spumax in a half pint hot water, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This not only takes the place of a face powder, but you will find it far better in every respect. It does not rub off or leave like powder, and benefits the skin. Apply this lotion to the face, rubbing gently until dry. It will take away that shiny, muddy, rough look and leave your skin smooth and fresh looking. This inexpensive lotion is now used largely by women of refinement, and is unequalled for removing freckles, tan and skin pimples.

M. M.: No, do not use dry shampoo powder under any circumstances. Authorities on hair culture almost invariably condemn such mixtures, as they simply clog up the pores in the scalp and cause dandruff and other scalp troubles. When your hair needs washing, use for your shampoo a teaspoonful of cantrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. This makes a rich lather that cleanses perfectly and will leave your hair brighter, cleaner and fluffier than ever before. This shampoo rinses easily, dries quickly and positively will not make the hair sticky and brittle like soap does. If you will use this shampoo once, I am sure you will be so pleased that you will never care to try any other.

W. E. S.: To make your eyes clear, bright, and show the sparkle of health, dissolve an ounce of crysots in a pint of water and put a few drops in each eye twice daily. This soothing tonic is very strengthening to weak, tired, inflamed eyes and will make your eyes clear and beautiful. For sore, granulated lids it is splendid and greatly helps those who wear glasses.

Mrs. D. J.: You need a good, strengthening tonic and liver regulator, to purify your blood and build up your health. Take before each meal a tablespoonful of the following: Dissolve a half cup sugar up a saucer, mix with a half pint of cold water, then add a half pint of cold water. This home-made tonic will clear up a sallow, pinched complexion quickly, and as a liver regulator, it is simply splendid. It makes the best home medicine imaginable, and does wonders in restoring lost appetite, energy and general good health.

Veta S.: To clear your complexion and make it smooth, soft and satiny, use the following cream jelly: Mix together one ounce of alomoxin, two teaspoonfuls glycerine and a half pint cold water. Stir and let stand a few hours before using. This greaseless complexion-jelly is the finest thing you can get for reducing those large pores below your eyes and clearing up your complexion. It removes all pore-dirt, blackheads, freckles and skin pimples, and when used as a massage cream, fills out hollow cheeks and removes wrinkles readily.

Ella T.: Really, you have no just cause to worry on account of those superfluous hairs, because with a little delatone and water you can make a paste, which applied to the offensive hairs and left two or three minutes, then rubbed off, will remove every trace of hair. Get an ounce of delatone and use as I suggest, washing the skin after removing the delatone, and you will be delighted with results. Delatone costs a dollar an ounce, but is worth every cent, as it is unfailing.

Mae W.: I do not approve of dieting and exercising for fat reduction. The simplest and best way is to get four ounces of parrots from any drug store and dissolve it in a pint and a half of hot water. Take a tablespoonful before each meal, and to your great satisfaction you will soon notice your fat disappearing. This harmless remedy will not leave your skin wrinkled and flabby, and has the endorsement of thousands who have tried it.

He had been complied with in construction and appointment, that this stove had not been changed and that his attention had not been called to any condition involving a fire risk.

The builder from whom the owner purchased was then called, and had to admit that he was responsible for the setting of the stove as the police had found it.

'OUR MANNERS GROWING WORSE'

Columbia University Professor Lectures on the Deterioration of Morals.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—In an address upon the subject, "What Makes the General Welfare," Professor Franklin H. Giddings, head of the department of sociology of Columbia university, has declared that our manners and morals are deteriorating and have been doing so for the last 15 or 20 years.

Poverty was not a problem to be compared to the problem of morals, he said. From the politician to the Supreme Court the cause of the economic injustice was being fought.

"Before the nations of the world," said Professor Giddings, "we have the reputation of a nation that lets murder go unpunished. In the North as well as in the South negroes are burned. On all sides we see a desperate indifference to conduct. It is this that should give us a pause."

"Many RACES TOGETHER." "We have in the United States one of the largest populations ever gathered together, a population of many races, of very many nationalities, having different histories, different experience of life, different languages and profound differences of knowledge. Our people range from the most ignorant to the most learned. There are profound moral differences, from vice and crime to altruism, and profound economic differences, from direct poverty to enormous luxury. And to this intricate differences of ideals, temperaments and ambitions."

From this combination only three things can result and you cannot make a fourth. First, there may result a failure of large and effective team work. In legislation and government there has been little but chaos so far. Cities are

THE ATTIC PROBLEM SOLVED

By L. W. SUCKERT, Designer.

THE ATTIC

In building the new home or remodeling the old, there has always been a question as to what to do with the attic. Where the roof is high enough to allow "head-room" the attic space becomes absolute waste unless it is finished off to allow for use. This can be done at slight expense. The rough T & G door and two heavy wrought iron hinges gave it a heavy rustic appearance. Wrought iron electric fixtures and andirons were picked up cheap, from time to time and the final touch was given when the stencil decoration was added to the panels.

The sketch shows an attic room paneled with builders' board, a new material, inexpensive, yet very slightly and useful. At the end of the room an old chimney has been tamped and a large open fireplace built in. Bookshelves were built on either side and a couple of cedar storage chests were nailed in for seats, with the backs and caved out ends added.

The monotony of the evenly paneled ceiling was broken by the use of an arch which also took the place of the sway-bracing which had to be removed. A window was added to the rough T & G door and two heavy wrought iron hinges gave it a heavy rustic appearance. Wrought iron electric fixtures and andirons were picked up cheap, from time to time and the final touch was given when the stencil decoration was added to the panels.

Attic beautifying is by no means an impossibility. Often a waste space can be converted into a room of lasting delight. THE TRIBUNE welcomes inquiries regarding this and other suggested schemes shown on the Sunday Bungalow Page and will gladly answer gratis any questions asked. Send a self-addressed envelope with your inquiry to L. W. Suckert, Designer, 22 Bacon Block, Oakland.

NO COMMON GROUND.

"Chaos may be one of the results of our government, for we have made no effort to find a common ground. Republicans have succeeded, but the citizens have been like-minded men. Our tendency is away from any common ground. We may never be able to unite our aims, our ideals and our ways of thinking. If we cannot, we can only end in chaos."

OAKLAND

DISTANCE IS BANISHED BY RAIL

The New Line Makes Possible Country Life With No Equal.

The Foothill Boulevard of Oakland has been the means of bringing many auto parties to this side of the Bay, and now comes the announcement that one of the finest automobile drives in the world is about to be built in Oakland. This drive will be the extension of Broadway in its full width of 100 feet. Leaving its northerly direction as it passes the attractive Rock Ridge Properties it is to swing immediately into a sylvan park on upper Temescal creek, crossing the beautiful grounds of Mr. Charles Butters. It then skirts the shores of Temescal Lake, better known to the old-timers as Little Lake Chabot; thence still easterly through the Wick-son and old Dingee properties, and finally joining Thirteenth avenue at the head of Dimond Canyon, where the railroad enters Shepherd's Canyon to take the tunnel for Contra Costa county.

Starting from Twelfth and Broadway in the midst of city life one will pass successively, always traveling on a splendid boulevard, some of the finest homes in the West, such as the Hart home, the Wells house, the Butters property and many other splendid homes; some of the finest residential tracts, such as Rock Ridge, Claremont, Crocker Highlands and East Oakland properties. One will pass, all in the space of an hour's time, from city life into the wooded hills, by a fresh water lake, on into fields of poppies and lupines, then on the brink of a deep, wooded canyon, with its laurel, alder and redwood. Yet this is what is in store for the city of Oakland by reason of the construction of the Oakland-Antioch railroad.

When our correspondent spoke to Mr. Fred E. Reed, the subdivision manager of the Layman Real Estate Company, today, concerning Rock Ridge, he said: "Many people who, a year ago, said that our claims and statements for Rock Ridge were extravagant, have come to visit the tract in the last few weeks, and are now saying that we have been making good in every particular."

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD BE BEAUTIFUL AT FORTY

"If She Was Not Especially So at Sixteen, That Is No Reason Why She Cannot Acquire It, and These Well Known Beauties Are Good Examples of What One Can Do in Retaining Pulchritude"

Lillian Russell

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

[Copyright, 1911, by Lillian Russell.]

NO girl is to blame if at sixteen she is not beautiful, but any woman is to blame if she is not beautiful before she reaches forty. Beauty may sometimes be inherited; it can always be achieved.

Even the shape of the features largely depends upon the state of the health, and the thin, sallow, permanently old face can become smooth, rosy, and rounded through proper care of the face itself and the body of which the face is a part.

To grow old beautifully and gracefully is enough and to step into middle age successfully is a trial, and yet how many times one hears, "How much nicer Mrs. Blank looks than when she was a girl." This woman has developed the attractions of middle age; she has reached the place when character is stamped upon her face. The mistake that many women make when they feel their youth going is to settle down into apathy and despair, making no effort to bring out the attractions which belong to the woman who has passed her twenty years.

Balzac devoted a whole book to the woman of 30, and whether beauty or what stands for beauty is conducive to long life or not, it is a curious fact that the women noted for longevity have been those who have borne a worldwide reputation for fascination and who have made the cultivation of beauty a science.

Psychologists tell us, as if it were a recent discovery, that the woman of today is at her best both mentally and physically at 40 years of age. They point out in confirmation of this fact that all the beautiful leaders of society, club life, and the arts and professions are 40 years old and over, overlooking the fact that the women who made history were not famous for beauty or fascination until they were near or past the meridian of life.

Helen an Old Girl.

Both Helen of Troy and Cleopatra were 40 when the former precipitated the ten years' Trojan war and the latter brought Mark Antony beneath her spell. Helen at the end of ten years, when she was over 50, was taken back to her husband's heart and home with great joy, and Cleopatra retained Antony's love for a decade.

Diana of Poitiers was 36 when Henry II. fell in love with her, and he was only half her age, and it is said that even in ripe old age Diana kept the love and devotion of Henry. Every day Chateaubriand walked across the garden to visit Mme. Recamier, and Mme. Mars was 45 when she gained the zenith of her power, and for three generations Ninon de l'Enclos fascinated the youths of France. Some of the most successful preparations for the preservation of youth and good looks we owe to this woman who made the cultivation of beauty a life study. When she was 72 the Abbe Bernis fell madly in love with her, won by her fascination, beauty, and great wit.

We also have an historical record of a female centurion renowned for her beauty, the Countess of Desmond, who lived to be 145 years old and died in the reign of James I. from the effects of an accident. This wonderful woman at the age of 100 was so lively and so strong as to be able to take part in a dance, and five years before her death traveled all the way from Bristol to London, not a short journey in those days, that she might personally attend to some business affairs.

Society's Leaders Mostly Grandmothers.

Coming down to the women of today the leaders of both American and English society are mostly grandmothers. In Chicago Mrs. Potter Palmer is indisputably the head. In New York Mrs. Astor, who died recently, was a great-grandmother and the women who are trying to step into her shoes, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and others, are over 40.

Ellen Terry's husband (who is fifteen years younger than herself) says of her that she is the most fascinating woman in the world; Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, the mother of the Duchess of Marlborough, who has been a famous beauty and society woman and is now a grandmother, is devoting herself to woman suffrage and the betterment of her sex. The Countess of Warwick has been a beauty for two generations and she is now one of the most beautiful women in England, and a grandmother.

I think that the hygienic laws practiced by women who wish beauty not only ward off the decrepitude and consequent ugliness that is supposed to be the heritage of age, but they hold the great rasper at bay as well. Good health promoted by activity tends to longevity. We cannot have good health and be indolent or self-centered. We must have the daily stimulus of variety.

Energy Mainspring of Life.

To be long lived and to be beautiful, which means long lived, one must be energetic and industrious both in temperament and in habit. We must be blessed with activity of brains as well as activity of heart, lungs, and digestive organs.

Given this activity the modern woman who has lived and experienced is infinitely more attractive than a girl. She has gained sweetness and strength from trial; she is more entertaining, has more tact, and more knowledge of how to please.

It was only a few years ago, in fact, our mothers were relegated to the fireside after their children had grown. The mother lived in her memory and all the money that was spent was spent for the little frills and follies of her daughters. Her mother it was all over.

Countess of Warwick, Who As Lady Brooke, Was Called the Most Beautiful Woman in All England. She Gives Much of Her Time to Philanthropic Work.

Emma James, the Opera Singer who has recently taken to herself a New Husband Although She Is Nearing Fifty.

Suddenly woman awakened to the fact that after 35 she was at her best and that her beauty need not fade unless she wishes it. There is absolutely no need to dread advancing years if one will advance with them in dress, habit, and costume.

One of the most general signs of age is that the woman becomes rather slack about her gowns; she doesn't look for admiration any more, but as she grows older she should become more fastidious about her dress. There is no need of the modern woman dressing like a girl. She should be proud of her own beauty—the beauty that comes to women of her own years and she should make the best of that.

Rules for Keeping Young.

She must take better care of her hair, and in doing this after 40 she must remember that all of the lines of the face should be upward. The hair should be carried to the top of the head softly; the chin should be lifted, for with the chin lowered the woman takes on a reproachful (egotistical) cast of countenance, and holding the chin down, if one is apt to be fleshy, brings double chin.

It seems as if it would not be necessary to impress upon any mature woman the necessity of absolute cleanliness. Bad grooming can sometimes be excused in youth, but never in a woman past 30. There must be no wisp of hair flying, no untidiness about the set of the collar, everything about the mature woman should be taut and in place.

A friend of mine who married at 42 and who is now

56 is one of the most beautiful and charming women I know. I asked her the other day what her rules for not growing old were and she answered: "Don't get rheumatism, be careful of your diet so that it will eliminate uric acid, eat little meat, don't get lazy and logy, be spry if it kills you, take the open air breathing exercise to ward off the tendency to puff; try the Japanese morning exercise, take three steps forward, bend the knee, three steps backward, bend the other knee. By the time you have repeated this three times you will begin to feel youthful."

Take a Turkish bath at least every two weeks. I myself take a Turkish bath always every other day and sometimes daily. Don't feel that you are giving too much time if you devote one afternoon each week to your body. On this afternoon you can have your bath, your hands manicured, your face massaged, your hair brushed and treated, and beautifully coiffured. Don't say that this takes too much time. You will spend hours for the making of a dainty collar or piece of underwear. You will insist upon your furniture being put in perfect order each day. Why not look upon your body as needing quite as much and important attention as your dinner table or any other of the hundred and one more trivial things that take up your attention and time?

Old Walt Hill and I once were detailed to weed out of the mountains a gang of bushwackers who were playing havoc in the surrounding country. On the morning we were to start Walt disappeared. In looking for him I came upon a wheel from a cannon carriage.

Well, I knew intuitively where Walt had been taken, so I jumped inside the wheel and set it in motion. I was spinning along at about a mile a minute when I made a sudden turn and came upon the camp of the bushwackers. I was going fast but I knew exactly what to do.

Straight into the camp of the enemy I rolled my wheel, knocking down horses and men alike. In among them I dashed, scattering them to the four winds. So sudden and unexpected was my appearance that they offered little resistance, and I worked with great rapidity.

I balanced myself among the spokes of the wheel, kicking my feet out and hurling my fist at the ruffians. They were completely routed before I had fairly begun, but I determined upon having some fun with them. So I set about in earnest tumbling them around the camp.

Quick as a flash I reversed the wheel and started back from whence I had come. In this way I was enabled to give the miscreants a second tumble, for they lay directly within my path, and I had much pleasure in hoisting them in the air and seeing them squirm. But I did not see Walt.

Suddenly, however, I spied him. My wheel, too, was slowing down. I grabbed a rope fastened to a stake in the ground, and swung around it several times, thus gaining speed. As each man arose to his feet I would promptly throw him down again. Finally they refused to move.

Walt was lying on the ground tightly bound by heavy ropes. I turned my wheel in his direction and grabbed him as I flitted by him. Holding him at arm's length I rested for a few seconds, telling Walt to lie in my hands as quietly as possible. He did so until I regained my breath.

Then, keeping the wheel in rapid motion with my feet, I drew Walt to me and started the difficult task of releasing him. He was securely bound, all right, but I picked the knots loose with my little fingers, meanwhile juggling him like a baseball just for the pure fun of the thing.

Then, Walt on one side of the wheel and your Uncle Opie on the other side, our feet tightly interlocked, we sped around the camp and made prisoners of all the desperate bushwackers. They promised to quit the country, however, so we released them. We have not since heard of them.

S. Chandler Rogers, Knocked Senseless in 1897, Recovers Mind Oct. 20, 1911

In Meantime Victim of Blow Serves in U. S. Navy and Later Is Married

SEATTLE, Oct. 21.—S. Chandler Rogers, who was attacked by three ruffians at the corner of Eighth avenue and Sixteenth street, New York City, on the night of May 1, 1897, and thrown into the Hudson river after his skull had been fractured, wandered about the world for fourteen years under the name of George Kelly and was restored to himself in this city yesterday as the result of a surgical operation that removed pressure upon his skull.

Under the name of George Kelly he served eleven years in the United States Navy and was discharged at Bremerton July 1, 1910. Then he went to work in a sawmill at Port Blakely and was married there two months ago.

WANDERS IN FOREST.

On October 10 he disappeared from his home and was found three days later in the dense forest, crawling on his hands and knees and snapping like a dog. On October 13 he was brought to a hospital in Seattle. He was unable to speak or see, and apparently was paralyzed. Last Sunday an operation was performed to remove a portion of the skull that pressed upon the brain. Yesterday Kelly asked for pen and paper and wrote a concise and intelligent letter to his half sister, Miss Florence Doucet, 413 West Third-second street, New York City, closing his letter by stating that he was in a hospital. He signed the name S. Chandler Rogers. FOURTEEN YEARS OF LIFE LOST.

Rogers then asked for a newspaper and was dumfounded when a paper dated Seattle, October 20, 1911, was handed to him. He asked where he was and when told he broke down and wept. On recovering his composure he told this story:

"I do not know where I have been or what I have been doing for fourteen years. I was born in New York City in 1880. I lived with my grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Doucet, West Third-second street, New York. I was first a messenger in New York and then a messenger with a big trust company. I used to box in a theater to earn a little side money."

"May 1, 1897, I took a vacation. With a friend I went to a theater, accompanied by two girls. I took my girl home and then started to walk to my own abode. At the corner of Sixteenth street and Eighth avenue I met three men who asked for a match. I told them 'I am no match factory.'"

WOKE BRASS KNUCKLES.

"Then one made a pass at me. I struck at him with my brass knuckles on my right hand—I always wore them at night—it was then midnight. 'Another man of the three struck me with a blackjack and I fell to my knees. The next I knew I was swimming in the river, almost stark naked. 'I remember catching hold of a pile and yelling for help. I can remember being dragged from the river, and that is the last I know, except that I woke up here in this hospital in Seattle Tuesday morning.'"

Southern Pacific Clerk Run Down by Machine on Twelfth Street

John Smith Receives Injuries Which May Result in His Death

Run down by a speeding automobile shortly before 12 o'clock last night on Twelfth street near Broadway, John Smith, 32 years old, of 605 Apper street, assistant to the chief clerk of the Southern Pacific company in San Francisco, was taken to the Receiving hospital severely injured.

It was feared by the surgeons that he had sustained a fractured skull. Ernest Fitzpatrick was driving the large automobile which was in the rent service and was bound for East Oakland. He had turned into Twelfth street from Broadway when Smith, accompanied by C. H. McCoy, attempted to cross the street. Smith evidently became confused and the automobile bore down upon him.

Several women waiting for cars fainted at the sight and a large crowd gathered. Fitzpatrick stopped and picked up his victim, rushing him to the Receiving hospital. McCoy was not injured.

At the hospital Inspector Tylic placed the chauffeur under arrest. He admitted that he had been exceeding the speed limit, saying that he was in a hurry to reach his destination to pick up his fare.

Legislators Say That They Were Not Bribed

Further Testimony Taken in the Senator Stephenson Investigation at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 21.—The conduct of the legislators at the time Senator Isaac Stephenson was elected on March 4, 1909, when the absence of three Democratic members gave the senator a majority, was inquired into by the senatorial investigating committee today. Peter F. Leach, an assemblyman, who was opposed to Stephenson, said he had been asked to remove his opposition, but he declared no bribe offer had been made. John T. Farrell, one of the Democratic absentees, said he received no money for staying away.

Steep Pass in Mountain Country Held by the Forces of Young China

Renewed Fighting Is Expected Monday When Troops From Peking Face Enemy

PEKING, Oct. 21.—Three thousand troops of the Imperial Chinese army are cut off north of Hankow as a result of the seizure by the rebels of a steep pass in the mountain country, which bars the highway and the railway between Hankow and the north. By the same clever piece of strategy the rebels hope to prevent a junction of the troops now on the way from Peking with the army that engaged the rebels in the vicinity of Hankow last Thursday.

The revolutionists, who have been active since their first engagement, have mounted a great many guns on all the surrounding hills. These guns command the pass and strongly entrenched as they are now the rebels appear to be in a position to control the situation indefinitely.

BATTLE EXPECTED.

An engagement is expected by Monday, as by that time the government will have received large reinforcements and may attempt to force the pass. The foreign legations here are arming and provisioning to defend themselves and those taking refuge with them, should the necessity arise tomorrow, the day on which the revolutionists have planned, according to rumor, to assert themselves in the city.

The warning came from students, and was sent to all missionaries in Peking province. The national assembly meets tomorrow for its second session this year and the warning of the outbreak for the same day caused great uneasiness.

There is no doubt that the government is suppressing all news that is unfavorable and it is said that more serious news than that of the defeat of the government troops by the revolutionists at Hankow Wednesday has been received. There are persistent rumors also that Admiral Sah's flagship has been sunk or captured. It is reported that the rebels are now holding Kwang Chow at the narrowest point on the Yangtze-Kiang river and they are also in possession of the railway near Kwang Shu.

SOLDIERS ON THE MOVE.

Orders were given several days ago for the dispatch to Hankow of 30,000 troops from Manchuria. There are no signs that this is being done, but three trainloads of soldiers have left Mukden, ostensibly for Kichow.

An ominous telegram reached Peking late today to the effect that the viceroy's

Fowler Covers 58 Miles In Exactly 68 Minutes

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Oct. 21.—Robert G. Fowler, the aviator who started from Los Angeles Thursday on a transcontinental flight, arrived here at 11:28 o'clock this morning from Pasadena, covering the fifty-eight miles in sixty-eight minutes. Fowler carries with him a letter from Mayor Thum of Pasadena to Mayor Gaynor of New York. After remaining at the Glenwood Inn over night with his mother, who arrived on a special car at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, Fowler will resume his flight tomorrow morning, passing over Colton and thence to Banning, on the edge of the desert, where he will stop for supplies and to communicate with his mechanics and others of his party. From Banning he will go direct to Yuma, and then on towards El Paso, following the Southern Pacific tracks. On his flight today Fowler maintained an average altitude of 4000 feet. As he approached Riverside he ran into a dangerous current in the upper air and was forced to descend near a cement plant just outside the city.

People of Sinaloa Uneasy Over Prospect of Battle

SINALOA, Mex., Oct. 21.—There is great excitement here in expectation of a battle in this vicinity. Colonel Ochoa, at the head of a force of rurales, occupies the city, but General Banderas, the ex-revolutionist, who is in revolt, is coming from Culiacan Rosales at the head of several hundred mutinous federals and other recruits with a plentiful supply of galling guns, rifles and ammunition. There appears to be a contest for authority between the recently elected government of Governor Renteria and his ally, Banderas.

DINED WITH GIRL NIGHT OF CRIME

Detectives Say Minister Was With Avis Linnell Shortly Before Murder

Wealth of Millionaire Edmonds to Be Behind Defense of Alleged Slayer

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—The Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, a modern Arthur Dimmesdale of "The Scarlet Letter," who is accused of the murder as well as the betrayal of Avis Linnell, the pretty young choir singer, in giving her cyanide of potassium under the guise of a harmless medicine which would spare them both a publication of their shame, is held tonight in a remarkable chain of circumstantial evidence which the police have forged link by link.

The fact that the minister wished to hide beneath his clerical robe a letter which he should wear with the young woman he had long courted, and who believed herself soon to be his wife, would furnish a motive for the crime, but the unexpected announcement of his engagement to Miss Violet Edmonds, an aristocratic and very wealthy young woman, gives a further and more moving reason why the only person who stood between himself and happiness and riches should be removed.

CRUEL AND TRAGIC DEATH.

The cruel and tragic death of Avis Linnell, which the Rev. Dr. Richeson treated so lightly, has been laid at his door and the following facts have been established:

Richeson bought a quantity of cyanide of potassium and enjoined secrecy upon the druggist who sold him the poison.

He had secreted the purchase of the poison he telephoned to Miss Linnell at the Y. W. C. A. in Boston, where she had a room while here as a student of music and a choir singer. This was on Friday, October 13.

On the following day he was heard to make an appointment to meet Miss Linnell the following day, and she was happy over the opportunity to meet her preacher sweetheart, and perhaps hoped to hear from his lips that the report of his engagement to an heiress was untrue.

Miss Linnell told a number of her friends that she had an appointment for Saturday the next day with her "friend," whom all knew as Richeson.

LUNCHEON WITH PASTOR.

Today a witness was found who is not a member of the Y. W. C. A. and knew nothing about Miss Linnell's appointment, but who met the young woman last Saturday afternoon and Miss Linnell told her that she had lunched in a restaurant together on Saturday.

The police have even found, they say, the restaurant in which this last and tragic luncheon occurred.

Saturday evening Miss Linnell was found dying in the bathroom of the Y. W. C. A. An investigation showed that she had taken a quantity of cyanide of potassium. Mute evidence made it clear that the young woman had not taken the dose with suicidal intent.

Richeson was called on the telephone and told of Miss Linnell's death. He appeared to be annoyed and asked why she was there. He was told that she was known as the fiancée of Miss Linnell and her friends at the Y. W. C. A. understood that she had lunched with him that day. The minister denied stoutly that he had seen Miss Linnell.

Thursday the druggist who sold Richeson the cyanide of potassium told the police of the minister's purchase and admonition of secrecy. The doctor was located today at the home of his fiancée, Miss Edmonds, where he spent the night. The police who called were denied admission, but the following morning he was found and placed under arrest. He made no statement.

The police learned tonight that shortly before her death the girl told some of her friends at the Y. W. C. A. that she had been with her "friend"—as she always referred to him—and that he had given her some powder that would cure her.

"I am so happy," she told the other girl, the police say, "now I shall not have any more headaches." The other girl was not aware of Avis' predicament and the little Hyannis girl wished to conceal her real trouble, referring to it as "headaches."

This is evidence against Richeson which was completed today. The facts the police are weaving together are a net of circumstantial evidence of veil-like fineness, from which they believe the prisoner will not be able to escape, and at one time this building up a tragic romance more absorbing and sad than Hawthorne's tale of old Salem town and the fate of Arthur Dimmesdale and Hester Prynne.

RESIGNS PASTORATE.

Today Richeson anticipated the action of the church authorities by resigning his pastorate of the Emmanuel Baptist church in Cambridge. It is said he has prepared a statement to be read in the church tomorrow. If so, it will be the first statement he has made since his arrest.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—A glass of chloroform left beside a similar glass containing water will probably cause the death of Mrs. Lola Farr, 22 years of age, who swallowed two ounces of the poison by mistake late this afternoon. The chloroform had been used to stop a toothache and Mrs. Farr told the hospital attendants in a moment of consciousness that she had taken it thinking it was water and had swallowed several mouthfuls.

Artificial respiration was given her by the doctors and attendants at the General Emergency Hospital and everything possible was done to save her. At midnight she was re-

ORCHIDS ADMIRER.

The orchid show, arranged by the MacRorie-McLaren Company, drew the largest crowd of admirers today. The orchid exhibit surpassed anything of the kind ever seen in the city, and the numerous varieties made the spot exceptionally interesting.

The "all-the-year-round" quality of California orchids was suggested in a number of ways. Violets and American Beauty roses were combined in a basket decoration, in another gladiolas and sweet peas in a plan, and in a third orchids suggested the "always spring" phase of flower culture in this state.

Sir Henry Heyman's orchestra added to the general success of the flower show. The music, both of the "orchestra of the sea" of flowers, the orchestra furnished a delightful program for each

This is typical of New York. It seemed to like a continuation of the extinct snobbery of the new theater. No other parts, save perhaps that of the priest, admirably played by Arthur Lewis, called for attention. In fact, "The Garden of Allah" was scarcely a treat. It was a gorgeous feast for the eye. Nothing more.

ACCUSED MINISTER IS NOW A PHYSICAL WRECK

has made relative to the death of the girl since his telephone conversation, when he was notified she had died suddenly.

Miss Edmonds, who was to have been married to the young minister on October 31, is sick with grief over his predicament, but is loyal to the accused man, and today her father, Moses Grant Edmonds, the Brooklyn millionaire, engaged Philip R. Dunbar, a prominent attorney, to defend Richeson. Dunbar will be assisted by his father, former Judge Dunbar. Edmonds relied upon Richeson as his cell and told him of his own and his daughter's belief in his innocence, and pledged his support to the limit of his resources in his defense.

IMPORTANT CLEW

Richeson is face to face with evidence that he dined with Avis Linnell last Saturday only a few hours before she innocently swallowed the fatal poison which, according to the police, he had given her. This was the one missing link, the detectives asserted, in the chain of evidence that connected the young clergyman with the most remarkable crime in the recent annals of New England.

The young clergyman has not broken the attitude of silence he assumed at the time of arrest. He spent the day pacing his cell in the Charles street jail and spoke only to Moses Grant Edmonds, his prospective father-in-law, and Philip R. Dunbar, his attorney.

WEDDING GIFTS RETURNED

Miss Violet Edmonds, the prospective bride, is still prostrated by the shock caused by the arrest of Richeson, and is under the care of two physicians. Miss Edmonds' mother has occupied the room in the hotel which was to have been the bride-chamber, and is directing the return of the wedding gifts sent by friends from distant points.

Mrs. Edmonds declared to a neighbor today that Richeson could not have been with Avis Linnell last Saturday, as she was at home. The wealth of millionaire G. F. Edmonds' estate will be poured out to finance the defense of Richeson.
George F. Edmonds was the father of Moses Grant Edmonds, and grandfather of Miss Violet Edmonds, whose marriage to Richeson is now being taken place October 31st. Moses Grant Edmonds said tonight that the family would stand by him until the last.

POLICE MYSTIFIED

The police say they are at a loss to understand why the Edmonds family seems to be so reticent. It is shown by their secret investigation that Richeson spent several hours with Avis Linnell Saturday, October 14th, the day she swallowed enough cyanide of potassium to kill ten persons.

A new witness discovered by the police has told that the young cleric singer's last words were, "I dined twice with Mr. Richeson."

The police assert further that they have found the restaurant where Richeson and the girl dined. They have traced a girl there, who was seen together, who recognized them and who talked with Miss Linnell.
This girl will be a most important witness at the trial of Richeson and the police would not tonight reveal her identity. It was claimed that Miss Linnell had confessed to her secret she had jealously guarded from others.

MAY PLEAD INSANITY

While the police were laboring to complete their case, Richeson's lawyer, Philip R. Dunbar, the son of Former Judge Dunbar of the Massachusetts supreme court, was planning to fight for the clergyman's life. It is already intimated that a plea of insanity will be made if the case ever comes to trial.

Many people can be found who admit that Richeson was a most eccentric person, but there are out there express the opinion that his mind was unbalanced at the time this deed was committed. Dr. H. M. Gardner, who has performed professional services for the clergyman, today made the following statement:

"Richeson for about six months. His only ailment is a case of nervousness. The only medicine I have prescribed for him is what is ordinarily prescribed in cases of nervous breakdown and his condition was due wholly to overwork.
There is absolutely no trace of insanity about the man. Dr. Battewell prescribed for him at the Edmonds home and from what I gathered the only medicine he gave him was for his appetite."

CAREER OF PASTOR

Tracing the career of Richeson today, the police found out many strange things about the theological student and hypnotic young preacher.
It was mainly a story of girls, girls, girls.

The fact that he was engaged to Avis Linnell, Edmonds' daughter, at the same time in small circumstance in comparison with the stories of his Mormon-like propensities for engagements that came from other cities where he had been a student and preacher.

One of the most remarkable of these engagement stories comes from Kansas City. Richeson preached there as a supply pastor in the Budd Park Baptist Church. He was engaged, according to the report, to three girls there at the same time.
They learned of it and the girls walked into church one day and sat in the same seat. Richeson saw them. But his superb nerve stood him in good stead and he preached fervently about how mothers should watch over their daughters.

When services were over the engaged trio fled up to the altar and right out before the startled congregation accused him of promising to marry all three of them. In polished, courteous phrase, the clergyman excused himself. He disappeared and never stood in that pulpit again.

ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT

Comes from the little village of Georgetown, near Haverhill, another engagement story and this time a feminine trio also figures. Richeson preached at a revival service there and he paid some attention to reviving the love of the hearts of some of the feminine members of the flock.

One of the girls that caught the alluring eye of the cavalier clergyman was Miss Alice F. Howe, the daughter of a deputy sheriff. It was reported that they became engaged.
The preacher then disappeared from the house. He gave Miss Howe several promises, then it became known that he was engaged to two other girls of the town, one of whom was Miss Alfreda Chase and the Howes banished him.

Richeson rendered a bill for the presents he had given Miss Howe and her father retorted with a counter bill for a month's board and nursing he had required while receiving medical treatment. Miss Howe is a pretty maid who is at present engaged as a stenographer in a state institution.

MUSICIAN AND HEIRESS

It is believed that before Richeson faces a jury in court scores of other girls to whom he made love will become known. The only one so far as known that he really came near marrying is Miss Edmonds. That wedding was to have taken place the last day of this month and there is no reason to believe that Richeson would have backed out. Miss Edmonds is a charming girl, a talented musician and a graduate of Vassar.
Also she is an heiress.

The Rev. George B. Horr, head of the Newton Theological Seminary in Newton, Mass., was quoted as having stated today that the wedding had been indefinitely postponed. Miss Edmonds herself is heartbroken. She loved Richeson and even the grave accusation that has been brought against him has apparently not shaken her faith in him.

Richeson is a physical wreck in the jail. Snatched from a luxurious bed in the wealthy Edmonds home, he was transferred to an iron cot in a narrow, pictureless, uncomfortable, cheerless cage of steel. From dainty food prepared by skillful hands under loving, solicitous direction he had dropped to an unpalatable prison fare.

CLOSELY GUARDED

It was reported today that a special watch had been put on the preacher to guard him against suicide. His friends declare that this precaution is unnecessary and that he will make no attempt to take his own life.

The police who today made a search of Richeson's room in Cambridge declare that it had been thoroughly ransacked before they arrived.
Chief Dugan asked Lawyer Dunbar if he had been to the room. The lawyer replied that he had been there but found that somebody had preceded even him.

An effort is being made now to solve this new mystery. It is believed that the searcher, whoever he may have been, carried away all the evidence linking them, that would help to make clear the death of Avis Linnell.

The favorite book of the ex-clergyman was a volume of the weird, fantastic stories of Edgar Allen Poe. He took this volume with him last summer on his vacation.

When a student at the William Jewell College at Liberty, Mo., he wrote an article on "Love's Tragedy."
In this story he expressed a belief in love at first sight and dealt with the theme in a manner to indicate that he had given it considerable thought.

SCHOOLMATE OF HYDE

It was recalled today that Dr. Bennett C. Hyde, tried for the murder of Colonel Thomas H. Swope, the millionaire of Kansas City, was a student at the William Jewell College at the same time Richeson was there. It was alleged that Hyde killed Swope with cyanide of potassium, the same poison that ended the life of Avis Linnell.

Frank H. Carter, with whom Richeson roomed in Cambridge, has come forward with the story that two weeks ago Richeson threatened to poison their dog. This statement was put forward by Carter with the purpose of showing that when Richeson bought the poison in Newton he may have contemplated killing a dog with it, as he explained to the druggist, William Hahn. When Carter was asked about this statement today he said:

"I never knew Richeson owned a dog. I own a dog myself. I had him while Richeson was here and the dog is still in my possession."

It will be seen by this that if Richeson purchased the poison for the purpose of killing Carter's dog he did not carry out his intention.

DID NOT OWN A DOG

John Smith, sexton of Immanuel Baptist Church in Cambridge, declared that Richeson did not have a dog.
Dr. Gardner, Richeson's physician, when asked about the dog said:
"I never saw a dog with him at any time I called on him."

At Hyannis, the home of Avis Linnell, the residents are greatly incensed at Richeson. He was hanged in effigy there today. The figure of a man dressed in a frock coat and made up to represent the clergyman was suspended from a limb of a tree in the yard of the Baptist church where Richeson formerly preached. Tacked against the tree was a placard which read:

"Guilty, read Luke 17:2."

Those who look up this quotation find it to be as follows:
"It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he be cast into the sea than that he should offend one of these little ones."

The effigy was cut down this afternoon by a member of the church.

JEKYLL AND HYDE

The police of Boston are tracing Richeson's previous career and have found that in some ways he was a real prototype of the famous "Dr.
Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Richeson is tall, slender, dark and Apollo-like in appearance. His is the fascinating suavity of the typical Southerner. He has the voice of a well-trained actor. He is of a poetic mood and reflects the tender sentiment that captivates. Surrounded with the sacred garb of his profession, it is little wonder that his career has been one of continued feminine conquests.

How many girls he knew other than Avis Linnell and Violet Edmonds will be developed before he is tried in a court of law.

TAKES CARBOLIC ACID AND DEATH IS NEAR

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Belle McLean, 30 years of age, was found unconscious in her room at the Hotel Menlo at 10:15 o'clock tonight, evidently suffering from poison. She was taken to the Central Emergency hospital and the stomach pump administered. She has but a small chance of recovering. It developed that she had swallowed carbol-ic acid, but whether or not she took it with suicidal intent could not be learned. Her husband called at the office, but was unable to give any information.

Of course, if the vote is widely split, nobody can tell what will happen."

HUNDREDS HEALED DAILY

No Charge Made for Healing Either at Office or at a Distance

Grateful Words From Letters Sent Francis Truth, 46 Kearny St., S. F. Hours 1 to 5 P.M. daily, except Sunday
Berkeley Office, 2345 Telegraph, cor. Channing; Hours, 9 to 12 a.m.

"You have to show me!" was the expression used by a business man last week when he went to see the great healer at his office, 46 Kearny street, San Francisco. This was not the first time the same expression had been made in these offices, but the result of the call was somewhat more startling than the skeptical anticipated. Being bowed with rheumatism for several years and having tried medicine and all other means, with the result, as he said, of so much sleep, he wanted to be shown, and Mr. Truth volunteered to show the gentleman just what could be done. A few minutes sufficed before he was able to hop with glea and, throwing his hands high in the air, he exclaimed, "Glory to God, he has done it! See, I am well!" "These demonstrations are not unusual here," said the healer to the writer. "Some are cured instantly and some it takes time to throw off or drive out the disease, which, perhaps, they have had for many years. Now, take the case of Miss Edith M. Bakeman of Newton Upper Falls, Mass., who was cured of total paralysis of one side. It took six weeks for her case, but she is satisfied, as she said, if it took six years it would have paid her." "Do you care if I give the names and addresses of some of the recent cures?" Mr. Truth was asked. "Well, I do not like to do that, as I always make a point of keeping the names of those who seek my aid private, but you may select a few if you think the public are entitled to them." "I certainly do," said the writer, and so it was agreed. The following are a few selected at random from the bunch.

Mrs. A. R. Menning of Los Angeles, Cal., writes in part: "I must say with heartfelt thanks that God will bless the hands that were the instrument through which I received my healing. I could not hear for years, scarcely hearing the clock strike by my side. Now I can hear well enough to carry on a common conversation with my friends."

Mrs. J. Yates of Hyland, N. Y., writes: "I arrived home safe and am feeling well and happy that I am able to walk without crutch or cane, and all my friends are delighted to see me so well."

Mrs. Jackson of San Mateo, Cal., writes: "I am pleased to let you know that you have cured my rheumatism. I have not had any pain or stiffness since you treated me. It is really most wonderful. Writing you success and happiness."

Mrs. A. S. Little of Ravenna, Neb., in a long letter telling of what Francis Truth had done for her, writes in part: "It was through the home healing that the cure was performed. My husband and myself were seriously injured in a runaway accident. My husband had a broken collar bone and I was cut and bruised seriously. In my husband's case the bone refused to heal and he suffered greatly. He was unable to sleep or move about. Your first treatment quieted all pain and we were both healed almost instantly and today I can say we are better morally and physically than ever before."

Mrs. Woodward of Los Angeles, Cal., who had not left her room for two years on account of nerve trouble, writes that she could not have possibly lasted much longer, but is now well and

SUTLIFF CASE IN HANDS OF COURT

Judge N. D. Hawkins Takes Matter Under Advisement
After Hearing Story.

Thomas B. Sutliff, a well-known local tobaccoist, and Mrs. Jennie C. Cochran of Fresno, his sister, yesterday continued their legal battle in the auxiliary department of the superior court to keep from contributing to the support of Margaret L. Rentschler, and at noon Judge N. D. Hawkins of Yolo county took the matter under advisement. Both Sutliff and his sister were on the witness stand in their own defense, the latter carrying the court back to Civil War times in Baltimore in her story.

Both Mrs. Cochran and Sutliff declared to the court that they could remember absolutely nothing about their early life with their mother that did not savor of her cruelty toward them. The daughter said that Henry Sutliff, her father, went to San Francisco from Baltimore in 1859 and established himself in the tobacco business. He was away from home until the spring of 1866, the witness said, when he returned only to find that his wife had just given birth to a child. She had induced a lady friend of hers to take the child away in the hope of hiding her alleged infidelity from Sutliff, but the latter discovered it, Mrs. Cochran told the court, and two months afterwards brought suit for a divorce from his wife on statutory grounds. The divorce was granted to him, Mrs. Cochran testified, together with the custody of the three children, but about eight weeks afterwards, when Sutliff decided to return to the coast, he effected a reconciliation with his wife and brought her along with the children. They were never remarried after the divorce, according to the best recollection of Mrs. Cochran.

Defendants said that after their father settled permanently in San Francisco their mother made life so miserable for him and treated the children so brutally that he was compelled to leave her, and have the court appoint a guardian for them.

"Mrs. Rentschler was never a mother to brother Thomas and me," said Mrs. Cochran, "only in name. She used to beat us unmercifully and kept the house in a turmoil all the time with her ungovernable temper. When my brother was taken away from her in San Francisco and turned over to his guardian his body was covered with bruises from the beatings that his mother had given him. She seemed to despise all her children and I cannot remember one motherly act of hers toward any of the children."

Mrs. Rentschler has asked the court to compel Mrs. Cochran and Sutliff to pay her $50 a month for her support and to settle debts amounting to more than $100 that she had contracted and claims to be unable to pay. The two children contend that they owe their mother nothing financially, nor as her children, and that she has no right to their money or affections. In addition they claim that they are not financially able to support the old lady.

HEBREW LEAGUE TO MEET.
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—The San Francisco Hebrew Civic League will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Santa Clara hall, 172 Golden Gate avenue.

PIERCE HARDWARE COMPANY NAMES A NEW MANAGER

GODFREY RUEGER

Godfrey Rueger, one of the best known hardware men on the Pacific Coast, has just accepted the position as manager of the Pierce Hardware Company of this city. Mr. Rueger has been identified with the hardware business on this coast for years. In accepting the management of the Pierce Hardware Company he leaves a very lucrative position as assistant manager with one of the largest jobbing hardware firms in the Northwest.

In making this change Mr. Rueger was influenced largely by the wonderful possibilities he sees in this city. Speaking of Oakland Mr. Rueger says: "I have been in close touch with the business affairs of the entire Pacific Coast for the last fifteen years and today I don't think there is a city in the entire West that is more favorably located about than Oakland. This city has the true booster spirit. I saw that same spirit in Los Angeles and Seattle. Both of these cities have developed wonderfully, but Oakland has something they can never have. It has the natural facilities for a great city and now that they have emerged from the village stage and are spreading out and developing these natural advantages, I will see one of the greatest eras of prosperity in this community that has ever been enjoyed by any city in the West. The whole Pacific Coast has its eyes on Oakland. It's known as a great town—one that is going ahead. There's why I decided to come here and there's lots of others that will come just as soon as they can."

The waterfront improvements Oakland is making are more talked about in other cities than they are right here. Yet, have you any idea of the interest business men are taking in that great enterprise. It means millions in trade to this city, besides hundreds of manufacturers who will be only too anxious to take advantage of rail and water connections."

MARKET LACKING IN REGULARITY

The Movements of Stocks Are Irregular During the Past Week.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Movements of stocks were irregular during the week with greater firmness toward its close. Speculative opinion was confused and uncertain and the market was lacking in stability. Fluctuation of prices were due to the operation of professional traders.

The widest movement was a decline of ten points in Great Northern Ore certificates owing to the announcement that the United States Steel Corporation would cancel its lease for the Great Northern ore lands.

The principal change in the industrial section was the improvement in the copper trade which resulted in a revival of speculative interest in the copper stocks. Prices of the metal were advanced as a result of increased demand for both domestic and foreign delivery.

Steel prices were brought closer to the cost of production with the result that the volume of new business was maintained.

Low rates for money and the inadequate supply of mercantile paper resulted in an increased demand for bonds at higher prices.

SHE WANTS TO REMOVE FAT

To the Beauty Editor:—
I am ashamed of my fat and wish to reduce my double chin and body and wish to ask you if there is any harmless way to reduce weight without taking medicine.

ANSWER: The only treatment that we would be willing to recommend for fat reduction is the drugless treatment offered by the famous calendar girl of Denver, Colo.

She has the only absolute drugless treatment for fat reduction known.

She only punishes, however, to reduce up to seventy pounds of fat, as she claims that no one could honestly promise to remove more than that much weight harmlessly.

It is said that thousands of women each month write to Miss Hamilton for her booklet, "Fat Reduction Without Drugs," and that her treatment is creating widespread admiration and curiosity in all countries of the world.

Write a letter to Marjorie Hamilton, Suite No. 1855, Central Bank Bldg., Denver, Colo., and ask her to send you her booklet, "Fat Reduction Without Drugs," which she promises free to all our readers enclosing a two-cent stamp to help pay postage.

Woman's Clubs of Alameda County

MRS. CLARA REICH, club woman of San Antonio, Tex., who was a guest of Mrs. R. L. David of this city.

Rev. Father Robert Semon, pastor of Mount Carmel Church of Mill Valley, entertained the members of the Eboli Club last Tuesday afternoon in the clubrooms on Harrison street, with a series of Italian and English folk songs which he heard while a student in Rome. The selections harmonized with the stories he related about the people of Capri, Sorrento and Naples. He appeared before the audience in the costume he wore while attending a Roman theological college. At the close of the recital he was greeted by the members, who expressed their appreciation for his brilliant musical interpretations.

Mrs. Fanny Ward Miller, formerly of this city, will present her latest Eastern success, Longfellow's "Divine Tragedy," in three acts, next Tuesday afternoon in Eboli hall. Her brilliant version of the tragedy will be artistically staged. Mrs. C. W. Kinsey will act as hostess. The hall will be decorated by a committee headed by Mrs. Hugh Hogan, who will be assisted by Mrs. Susan Fenton, Mrs. Cora Jones and Miss Ida Green. Mrs. Bunnell opened her remarks by alluding to the clubwoman as "Fellow Citizens." She spoke briefly on "Suffrage." Miss Green, who recently came from Massachusetts, is an interesting speaker. She spoke of the beauty of California scenery and of the broad and splendid work being accomplished by the women of this state. Solos by Mrs. Josephine Bunnell were enthusiastically received, the singer possessing a voice of rare beauty. Miss Eva Garcia, pianist, and Miss Katherine Webster, violinist, played a number of selections.

The speakers were Miss Bessie Grier of San Francisco, who spoke upon "Woman," Dr. Loken gave an interesting talk on "Norway." The members of the club have devoted themselves to a study of "Scandinavia." Mrs. Lillie Brunk, president of Berkeley P. E. O. chapter, delivered the address of welcome. Through a steady rain which pursued the Glidden tourists practically all the way from Philadelphia to Gettysburg the Flanders "20" contingent that makes up the Detroit and Atlanta No. 1 teams continued to hold the prominent place. Driver Cohen with Mayor Winn of Atlanta was among the first at both noon and night controls. All six of the Flanders finished well ahead of schedule at Lancaster, the noon stop, but there an accident occurred which robbed Driver Kunz of his perfect score. Kunz's car was in line at the curb after checking in, when a high powered roadster skidded on the wet pavement in its effort to make a quick turn and crashed into Kunz, putting the latter's rear axle out of commission. The skidding car was also badly injured and sustained heavy penalty. Kunz repaired his car and was tonight endeavoring to make up his lost time.

The day's run was full of skidding accidents, but the one in which Kunz's car was injured was the only one in which Flanders "20" was concerned. The other five Flanders finished with their usual perfect scores.

MUSICALES OF PAST AND PRESENT WEEK

EAMES AND DE GOGORZA STAR EVENT

EMMA EAMES, prima donna, and EMILIO DE GOGORZA, who will appear here in concert.

Sigmund Beel's Return Welcomed by Residents of Oakland, His Home City

On next Friday afternoon, October 27, at 8:15, Mme. Emma Eames, who is called by the critics of Paris, London and Berlin "The incomparable Eames," will appear in concert at the Liberty theater, as will Emilio de Gogorza, the great Spanish maritono. Both will appear on the same program and will sing in operatic and concert numbers and their glorious voices will blend together in no less than six duets. Here, indeed, is a veritable feast of song.

An added attraction, too, will be the work of an eighteen-year-old pianist, M.
Henri Gilles, who has just captured the first prize at the Conservatoire National de Paris and who is said to be really a genius. Naturally, with three such artists, one expects a colossal program, and a glance at the offering proves that all such anticipations will be more than realized.
For instance, the beautiful duets we are to hear are: "Oh, Would That My Love," "The Passage Bird's Farewell," and "The Maybell and the Flowers," all by Felix Mendelssohn; "Swing Song" and "Frot Here and There" by Andre Mes-sager; and the great dramatic scene from "Cavalleria Rusticana" with Mme. Eames as Santuzza and Mr. De Gogorza as Alfio.
Mme. Eames' solo numbers will include the "Ariette" from Rameau's "La Prin-cesse de Navarre," "Charming Butterfly" from Campra's "Fetes Venetiennes," the "Aria" from "Mme. Butterfly," two Schubert gems—"Gretchen at the Spinning Wheel" and "Liebesbotschaft"—and three songs in English by Peel Schindler and Beach.

De Gogorza's numbers will include works by Debussy, Massenet, three of Cadman's splendid Indian tribal ballads, and a considerable number of those delightful Spanish songs which no one can sing like De Gogorza.
M. Gilles' solos will be two Chopin works and Liszt's seldom played "Rhapsody Espagnole."

PROUD OF SUCCESS.
Sigmund Beel's arrival in San Francisco is of keen interest to the local musical colony. His plans are to settle across the bay and to help the musical development of his native state. As an Oakland boy, this city is naturally proud of his success in the musical world, and is rejoicing in his determination to remain in California after his long sojourn abroad.

As a violinist of distinction he is viewed by European critics with the highest regard. Beel plans to inaugurate chamber music concerts, including the immediate organization of a string quartet such as the celebrated one with which he was connected before he came to Europe.
The program was left yesterday for a concert tour of the south, where they will play in both solo and ensemble work in all the southern cities.
The trio will later tour the entire United States.

HALF HOUR OF MUSIC.
The Greek theater program for the half hour of music this afternoon is interesting.

Sanford Bennett, an aged San Francisco singer and physical culture exponent, will sing. Mrs. Fanny Elmsmore will be the pianist, and Marshall W. Gieselman will accompany.

The program is: Tarentelle (Nicole), Mrs. Larsen; "Ever of Thee," S. Bennett;
Kammenoi Ostrow (Rubinstein), Mrs.
Larsen; an old favorite, S. Bennett; Etude de Concert, Opus 23 (Rubinstein), Mrs.
Larsen; "If I Were a Knight" (Millard),
S. Bennett.

Mrs. William Waldeck Biers gave a most enjoyable concert of the week on Thursday evening, which was attended by many musical folk.

Mrs. Biers has a very fine soprano voice of strength and sweetness. She was assisted by Luther Marchant, baritone, whose voice is well known in the bay cities.

CONCERT FRIDAY NIGHT.
The Berkeley Young Men's Christian Association gave its first concert Friday evening in the association auditorium at Allston way and Milvia street, with Miss Helen Sutphen, violinist, and Miss Eva Grubinger, contralto, assisting. These other four programs will be given:

December 1—Miss Alice J. Andrews, so-piano; Wymong G. Garthwaite, violinist, assisting.

January 26—Miss Mary Sherwood, cellist; Mrs. Jo. S. Mills, contralto.

March 5—Miss Claire Ferrin, violinist; Arlen Male quartet.

April 12—The Male, Clef, assisted by Mrs. Lena Carroll-Nicholson, contralto.

SONG RECITAL.
A song recital of the week was given on Friday evening by Mrs. M. Jackson Catching, when her vocal pupils were heard in an enjoyable program which was as follows:

"Victoria, Mio Core—Aria, Carlisle, Dorothy McCargar; Bertha Ormsby, Florence Dean, Ethelrid Carr, May Euker, ler.

FRIENDS OF DEPENDENT PEOPLE END CONFERENCE

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The twenty-ninth annual conference of Friends of the Indians and Other Dependent Peoples, closed here with addresses delivered by Dr. G. Stanley Hall of Clark University, C. A. Rath of Honolulu, J. Allen Baker, P. and others, who instituted comparisons between British and American colonial administration.

The platform adopted urges suitable legislation for Alaska, advocates increasing the power of the Philippine government, deprecates political agitation of the Philippines and recommends a continuance of the present regime until the Filipinos have become capable of self-government.

CONCERT WELL ATTENDED.
RICHMOND, Oct. 21.—The concert given this evening by Signorina Ade-lina Dossena, coloratura soprano, and Signor Adolfo Mariotti, lyric tenor, who recently appeared here at the Eagles' benefit performance under the direction of H. N. Leavitt, was one of the most important of the year's musical affairs. It was given in the opera house under the local management of E. M. Ratto, and was well attended.

AWFUL TRAGEDY.
Timely advice given Mrs. C. Willoughby, of Marengo, Wis. (R. No. 1) prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives.
Doctors had said her frightful cough was a "consumption," cough and could do little to help her. After many remedies failed, her aunt urged her to take Dr. King's New Discovery. "I have been using it for some time," she wrote "and the awful cough has almost gone. It also saved my little boy when taken with severe bronchial trouble." This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles.
Price 60c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

STATE'S RESOURCES RUSH IS MADE FOR TO BE SHOWN IN CHICAGO NEW CALIFORNIA GOLD FIELD

The Southern Pacific to Have Exhibit at Land Show; Illustrated Talks.

Easterners Will Be Told of the Great Opportunity That Awaits Them.

When the doors of the Chicago Land Show are opened November 18 the largest section of floor space allotted to any exhibitor will be in possession of the Southern Pacific Company, which will present to the visitors a series of stereo-pion and motion picture lectures, representing the resources of California, describing its beauty and the splendid opportunities offered here to enterprising citizens of the east.

To the Southern Pacific is due a great deal of the credit of the greatly increased population of this state and it is being urged upon men familiar with the wonderful possibilities of California to send to this land show stereopion views, motion pictures and samples of products and tell the tens of thousands of people what awaits them in California.

Alameda, Tulare, Fresno, Los Angeles and San Diego counties will also be represented at this exhibit and it is hoped that other counties will also send samples of their exhibits.

TO TRANSPORT FREE.
The Southern Pacific will transport free exhibits of any California community desiring to have a display at the land show. It is the desire of many Californians to make this exhibition even better than it has been before and there is every reason to believe that this golden state should have an exhibit that would attract a great deal of attention. Its beauties and possibilities would be well appreciated if short, interesting, illustrated "talks" could be given by California citizens. The Southern Pacific will have one of the largest exhibitions at the show, two large rooms being maintained.
Thousands of pieces of literature will be distributed.

DANGERS OF FAT
HOW FAT AFFECTS THE LIVER
Next to the heart,
there is no organ of the body more susceptible to an abnormal increase of fatty tissue than the liver.
When the liver
becomes too fat, its action is impeded, allowing the fat-making foods to make more fat than is needed for normal symmetry. The liver, clogged with excess fat, becomes inactive, and, from disease, the nature of the organ undergoes a change. Catarrh, hepatitis, hepatitis, biliousness and similar disturbances of the system are not the least of the fat man or woman's troubles, for the rolls and layers of fat on all portions of the body increase, clogging other organs, paving the way to obesity. All this can be avoided, if the proper remedy is resorted to at once. Nothing ever discovered for the removal of fat is as effective as the famous Marmola Prescription.
However, from the same high authority came Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing all the elements of this sure, harmless Prescription and offering a more convenient means for reducing to normal weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day, without dieting, exercise or resulting weakness and debility. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 75 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case.

YATES LEGAL BATTLE AVERTED IN SAN JOSE

SAN JOSE, Oct. 21.—A big legal battle in the superior court of this county has been averted, the suit of Charles Morris Yates Jr. of San Francisco against other heirs of the late Charles M. Yates Sr., who left an estate of $150,000, being withdrawn.
The terms of the settlement are not stated. The action was to annul a purported deed made by the elder Yates in 1909 and filed the day after his death with the county recorder.

ROCKEFELLER TO GIVE CITY $60,000 LIBRARY

CLEVELAND, Oct. 21.—The public library board here has decided to take steps toward accepting an offer from John D. Rockefeller for a new $60,000 branch library building to be located in the east end, near Alta House, the social settlement building which he built and equipped in memory of his daughter.

SOME HUMORS OF
THE RECENT SUFFRAGE CAMPAIGN

AN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—Of course the suffrage stories fill the air, and here is the hardest one yet put over on the women. It is being handed around by an old cynic, and the worst part of it is he has the book to back him up. Here is how he goes at it:

"Ever read Schlegel's 'Philosophy of History?' he'll ask, and when he gets a negative he'll bring out his book and go on:

"Well, you know the Chinese have many thousands of characters in their alphabet—characters to represent everything in heaven above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth. You know that, don't you?"

"Yes; go ahead!"

"Well, they have one character to represent woman. And how do you suppose they represent strife, eh?"

"Well, how?"

"By two of the woman characters. And then how do you suppose they represent immorality?"

"Shoot!"

"By three woman characters! Don't believe it, eh? Here's the book—and Schlegel quotes the Abbe Remusat as his authority. Can't get away from that, can ye? Ha-ha! Eh?"

The Colonel and the Lady

And here's one that's going the rounds about Colonel John P. Irish and his anti-suffrage campaign—a tale in which the gallant colonel was forced to the retort courteous.

You know how the women flamed up when the colonel talked against their cause, and how they lost control of themselves under his argumentative hammering. The story goes that one fussy and blowsy female, who had hissed herself nearly into hysteria, came up to the colonel after his speech and shrieked:

"It's lies, lies, lies! It's all a pack of lies!"

"You think I'm a liar, madam?"

"Yes—lies, lies, lies!"

"Then you think I'm incapable of telling the truth?"

"Yes, utterly incapable!"

She Wouldn't Stand for It

On election day Coleman, the clever newspaper photographer, had an assignment to go out and get some pictures of suffragettes working at the polls. Being a man of taste and an artistic eye he was on the lookout for women showing the most style and pulchritude; but the crop seemed short.

Finally he saw a peach, a pippin, a ripe strawberry, walking rapidly up hill on Fillmore street. She was carrying over her shoulder a yellow "votes for women" banner.

"There she is! Catch her!" he urged to his chauffeur.

The machine soon came up to the beauty and Coleman was out, camera in one hand, hat in the other, asking permission to take a photograph and explaining that he was out for sugraettes whose pictures wouldn't lose circulation.

"But I'm not a suffragette!" said the peacherino, startled and blushing.

"You're not?" exclaimed Coleman interrogatively.

"What about that votes-for-women flag?"

"Oh, I just swiped that off a baker's wagon, and I was hurrying up for fear some one would catch me."

The Woman With the Serpent Tongue

When the first election returns came in indicating that suffrage had been defeated many of the enthusiastic suffragettes wept sincere tears of sorrow, and these have come into their joys since. We've all read about the tears, but not all of the women folks imitated Venus in the old Latin idiom—"suffused with tears as to her shining eyes." Some of the girls fit to th' end, an' fit hard.

Justice and Mrs. Max Sloss went into one of our newspaper offices to get the returns, and seated near the city editor was an earnest suffragette, who hadn't much comfort in her figures. Of course you know the brilliant Mrs. Sloss was one of the vice-presidents of the Anti-Suffrage Association.

"How's suffrage?" she asked.

"It's beaten," replied the city editor.

"That's good!" said Mrs. Sloss in a satisfied tone, while the suffragette looked up sourly from her tabulations.

"How's the recall?" asked Justice Sloss.

"Carried," replied the city editor, laconically.

"Isn't it strange how touchy these judges are about the recall?" rasped the suffragette—and having struck and stung she returned to her figures.

agents—and it will be noted that he does not seem to apprehend a very great increase in the voting population:

"She won't do it!" he exclaimed at his club.

"Won't what?" asked his friend.

"Won't register!"

"Why not?"

"Because she won't tell her age. To register every one must tell his or her age—and tell it truly, for a lie might mean San Quentin. And you can bet you my life, as the Duke says, milady will not tell her age. She'll lose her vote first."

"Where did you get that notion?"

"Right in my own experience. Many and many a time when I was rustling for business I've thought I had landed a woman to take out a policy. Well, I'd get along swimmingly until I came to the question:

"Now madam, what is your age?"

"What! Must I tell my age!"

"Yes, madam!"

"Can't I say I'm over 21 years old?"

"No; you must tell your exact age!"

"Then you can keep your old policy! I'll go to some company where I'll not be insulted!"

"No, sir; you'll find that mighty few of 'em will vote when it comes to the show-down—and most of those who do register will lie and take a chance."

Edgar Saltus and Elinor Glyn

Speaking of women reminds me that Edgar Saltus, the brilliant writer who went away from Los Angeles with the wondrously minded, though thin and homely city librarianess, is now in Buenos Ayres. And this leads me to the story of Saltus and Elinor Glyn.

The two were introduced in a party, and he hardly caught her name. In any event he did not make out that she was the author of "Three Weeks," and perhaps he was paying more attention to Mrs. "Billy" Graham, who was acting as chaperon.

In any event a party of four was made up for dinner—Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Glyn, Saltus and another gentleman. As the evening sped lightly at table, Mrs. Graham, expecting a compliment for Elinor Glyn, asked Saltus:

"Tell us what you think of 'Three Weeks'?"

"Two impassioned souls struggling with their grammar," replied Saltus with his stammer, entirely unconscious that he was giving a stab.

His Gallantry to the Sex

Saltus wouldn't have wounded for the world had he known it, for he is tender with women, no matter how harsh a tongue he has with men. I recall that, when calling on one of our married belles she mentioned a book that she thought was fine. He immediately coincided and praised the work to the skies. The two ecstasied over it for some time.

"Where can I get that book—I want to read it?" said his friend as they went out.

"Don't get it—it's hogwash!" was the astonishing reply.

"But here you've been praising it for half an hour. What do you mean?"

"Oh, always agree with a woman! Always agree with a woman!"

When They Met as Strangers

"I saw Saltus in one of the most embarrassing situations I ever found a man in," said one of the literary lights of the Bohemian Club. And it was Mrs. "Billy" Graham who was the cause of his woe again.

"We were at Santa Barbara and we went up together to call on Mrs. Graham. Now you know the first wife of Saltus married Willie Oothout, and the Oothouts live at Santa Barbara. The parting of Saltus and the lady was anything but pleasant, and sore spots were left all around.

"Well, either Mrs. Graham didn't know or she did it in a spirit of devilment; but, in any event, when Saltus and I were ushered in, there sat Mrs. Oothout with Mrs. Graham.

"I could have gone through the floor, but Saltus carried it off with a face that told nothing. We talked for a time and then rose to bid adieu.

"I bid you good day, Mrs. Graham," said Saltus, bowing to the hostess. And then turning to his first wife with the same sort of a bow, he said:

"Good day, madam! I didn't get your name!"

He Put One Over on Los Angeles

"Well, Los Angeles is a jay town, sure enough," laughed Harvey L. Moore on his return from the southland. "Lots of people there and more piling in all the time—but it's jay, thoroughly jay!"

"Why, I put one of the oldest jokes in the world over on 'em and they swallowed it, hook and bait and all. I couldn't believe it myself—it seemed so absurd. It was like 'selling a horseshoe' to an actor like Clarence Kolb—you couldn't believe it till it was done.

"Well, you know that old, old circular about the cat farm and the rat farm to feed the cats, and the profit on cat skins. Well, everybody from Milpitas to Petaluma has had a copy of it and passed it along. It's as seedy as the one on the soundless bean or that on the pelican depositors on the sea rock.

"But, do you know, I was in Los Angeles last week, and when a reporter came to me at the hotel I told him I was in Los Angeles looking for a cat farm. Then I fed him that moss-grown circular. Didn't think he'd take it; or if he did never dreamed it would get by the city editor.

"When I got up in the morning there was the story in the most prominent place on the first page of the biggest newspaper there. It was all set out in good faith—the great cat farm; the adjoining rat farm; the immense profit in cat skins; and me as the promoter of another gigantic enterprise for the southland. Can you beat it?"

Believed in Circumstantial Evidence

A jurist, one of San Francisco's best, beloved for his fraternal outlook on the club world and for his ability to recall a long list of experiences, told this to a gathering of the congenial the other night. It was at a recent murder trial that it happened. Examination of a varied assortment of venereans had dragged its weary way over two sessions of the court when one Cohen was called. This followed:

"Your name?"

"Isador Cohen."

"Business?"

"Neckwear."

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"Any children?"

"Six boys."

"Now, Mr. Cohen, this is a murder trial and circumstantial evidence is likely to play a part in the hearing of the young man accused. Do you believe in circumstantial evidence?"

"Well—my six boys."

Climate Affects Box Office

For the sake of box-office receipts perhaps it will be better to leave names out of this. It deals with Los Angeles and its climate. A widely-advertised vaudeville actor is now playing the city of oranges and tourists. He has encountered plenty of both and much of the weather. It is of the latter that he writes to a San Francisco theater man as follows: "Los Angeles is beautiful. It has a wonderful climate. I am sure of this, as almost every one I have met here has made it his business to impress the fact on me. Talking of beautiful weather and God's country here, it seems to be either a habit or a disease. I can foretell my reception at any performance by glancing at the sky. If the sun is warping the boardwalks of the suburbs, the world moves in right direction for the Angelinos and I am sure of a certain call or two. But as clouds loom low the populace mourns as for a favorite son and the audience brings its sorrow with it. I'd rather play a Western one-night stand than Los Angeles on a stormy day."

Stage Romance Revealed

Anent William H. Thompson's recent visit to the coast, I wonder if Oakland knows how the world-famous actor proposed to Isabel Irving in your city. It happened in the Metropole Hotel when Miss Irving and Thompson were with the lamented Empire Stock Company, that organization of talent that has gone with the years. "I liked Miss Irving," says Thompson. "She was utterly unlike other actresses I had met—a gentle woman with a firm determination not to let the stage and fame spoil her. On the night of which I would speak, I was torn with a desire to shed tears and a resolve to remember I was a man. Miss Irving was to leave for the east next day, another engagement calling her to New York. I lingered too long with my knee and elbow crooked and desire and resolve were soon replaced by a certain amount of Dutch courage that would have sassed the stage manager. I would propose to the lady of my eye and I was emboldened to such an extent as to ask Miss Irving for the happy honor of seeing her to her hotel. She accepted and we walked home from the Macdonough in silence, perspiration and couraging oozing out of my every pore. We reached the door of the Metropole and she turned to say good night and goodbye. I was busy with my thoughts and followed her into the vestibule, up the stairs and into the hall. 'Will you marry me?' I threw myself at her suddenly. She looked at me. 'Will you marry me?' I repeated. Still she gazed and still her wonder grew. 'Why—I—I—' Said I, 'I mean it.' Perhaps there was wafted to her the faint odor of cloves and all they were meant to disguise. A look of terror came into her eyes. She turned and fled and before I was fully recovered I heard the lock turn in her door. I bade her good-bye the next day, but nothing was said of the night before and the edge of my courage was dull as a carving-knife at a critical moment. But we were married some months after, just the same, but not until I had proposed and had been rejected by half a dozen others. It was the day after my secret marriage to Miss Irving, when the press managed to get hold of it, that I received from one actress to whom I had been devoted, a telegram bearing the one word, 'Faithless.' And there is one romance of the stage that has never been given to the public before.

High Compliment to Surgeon-in-Chief

If there is any one department of the Southern Pacific in which Chairman Lovett of the executive committee takes more than particular pride and satisfaction, it is the hospital service and the magnificently equipped hospital building in this city. The Southern Pacific Railroad Hospital is pronounced by all surgeons who have inspected it as the finest institution of the sort in the world. The hospital is the creation of Dr. F. K. Ainsworth, surgeon-in-chief of the Southern Pacific. He has a wonderful genius for mechanics and the various labor-saving and sanitary devices he has invented for the equipment of the hospital are being copied the world over in all the great surgical institutions. When Lovett, who was then president of the Southern Pacific, was out here a few months ago, he paid a visit to the hospital and made a careful inspection of the same. Dr. Ainsworth was in need of a liberal appropriation to effect certain plans in connection with the building, but he feared to name the amount to Lovett lest it might be deemed extravagant. He did, however, state a certain figure, which was pretty stiff. Lovett said he would think it over. He evidently did think it over, and then some, for in a few days Dr. Ainsworth received word that whatever requisition he might make would be promptly honored with the president's O. K., no matter what the amount. That was a pretty big compliment and no wonder Dr. Ainsworth was showered with congratulations from the medical fraternity.

To These Hail and Farewell

Death has cut a wide swath in journalistic ranks in this city. The deaths of Louis S. Whitcomb, Bennie Benjamin and Fred Bennett have been recorded this week—all of these were, each in his particular field, men of wide acquaintance, years of experience and numbering hosts of friends. Whitcomb's advent in the local field of newspaper work dated away back into the later 70's. He was one of the best known men in his line, which of late years had been almost exclusively as a political writer. He was a handsome fellow and always immaculately groomed. He had the appearance of a successful financier and was often referred to by the old-time newspaper men as the "Banker." Benjamin was a writer on sports, always safe and sane. Bennett's work was the "water-front" and the excellence of his department often reminded one of the late W. N. Hart, who was without exception the star water-front reporter whose work has never been excelled.

Appearances Very Deceptive

The automobile agent out on Golden Gate avenue has hardly yet recovered from his surprise. One morning this week, with no sales in sight, he sat in his office smoking and cogitating how to get the next goodly sized sales' commission. His list of names of possible or probable customers did not look promising for the day. In the act of going over it again, in walked a middle-aged, tall fellow, dressed without a care and leisurely chewing a piece of tobacco. After an exchange of "Howdy-dos," the unpromising looking customer said he wanted a machine.

"For how long?" asked the agent, thinking it was a renting proposition.

"For keeps," was the indifferent reply.

Even then Mr. Auto Man was dubious about a transaction.

"I am thinking about getting a machine for four," volunteered the man. "The old woman and the gals are pestering the life out of me for one. Yours is the first store I've found and I guess your machines are as good as any others, ain't they? Show me a four-seater."

The agent began to take notice at this juncture and was soon exhibiting his wares in the most approved fashion. The man liked the second auto shown him. It was $4000.

"Let's take a ride and see how it works," was the matter of fact request of the shabbily dressed man.

This was done. Out to the beach and back was the trial spin.

"I'll take it," was the decision of the stranger after landing back at the salesrooms.

He displayed enough money to buy three machines, told where to ship it and arranged for a chauffeur to spend a few days at his home to instruct "the old woman and gals" how to run it.

The customer turned out to be the richest man in his town, which is not far away from the State capital, and his "gals," as he called them, are prepossessing graduates of Mills Seminary. When in town he is always a welcome guest at the St. Francis, where they know that in his case appearances are certainly very deceptive.

RESULTS OF MINE EXPLOSION TO BE SHOWN

National Safety Demonstration at Washington Will Have Realism.

'SAFETY OF WORKERS' THEME OF MEETING

Problems of Mining Scheduled to Be Solved October 30 and 31.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The actual reproduction of an explosion in a coal mine promises to be the really dramatic feature of the two-days' program of the National Mine Safety Demonstration, October 30 and 31, at Pittsburgh, Pa.

The demonstration, which is under the auspices of the bureau of mines, the American Red Cross and the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' Association has for its purpose a friendly meeting of the mine owners, superintendents and the miners from all over the country to witness and talk over the dangers of the mines and the remedies for certain of the dangers as advocated by the bureau of mines.

The bureau has long been of the opinion that coal dust in a mine was more of a menace to the miners than gas and has frequently demonstrated this in an experimental steel tube at its station, Fortieth and Butler streets, Pittsburgh.

GREAT PRECAUTIONS.

These experiments, showing how easily the coal dust becomes ignited and causes an explosion, have been taken as conclusive by the great majority of mine owners and superintendents, and now great precautions are being taken to keep down the coal dust in mines. The question has, however, risen, not only in this country, but also in European coal producing countries whether the results obtained in the experimental tube are the same as would be found in a mine under working conditions. In order to settle this problem and to make still more conclusive the bureau's contention that coal dust is the real danger of the mines, the bureau's engineers started the digging of a mine at Bruceton, Pa., twelve miles from Pittsburgh. The mine, which was planned to resemble many commercially operated mines in Pennsylvania and other states, is now ready for the experiments. Where the bad practices found in mines where the lives of men are risked will all be contained in the experimental mine, and black powder, the most dangerous explosive in dangerous mines, will be used.

Most mine explosions are caused by what the miners term "blow-out" shots. That is, the explosive, instead of breaking the coal, blows out through the hole drilled in the coal to contain a stream of flame into the mine. This flame generally ignites the gas or coal dust. The engineers will reproduce the "blow-out" shot. They will make certain that it will be a "blow-out" shot and then will watch for results.

These experiments will take place the afternoon of October 30. The mine, located at Forbes field, the baseball park, there will be friendly contests between first-class teams of miners from nearly 100 mines. President Taft will witness this part of the program. Already more than 20,000 miners have declared their intention of witnessing the experiments. Miners in the Pittsburgh district have been granted a holiday for the 31st.

YOUNGSTERS WILL ROMP IN 'JACK AND THE BEANSTALK'

MISS ANITA MARSHALL (upper) and PEARL REMINGTON, who take leading roles in 'Jack and the Beanstalk.'

The musical comedy, "Jack and the Beanstalk," will be given by Catholic Ladies' Aid society No. 33 Thursday evening, October 26, at St. Joseph's hall, Seventh and Chestnut streets, under the direction of Mrs. Anna McDonald.

The production, for which elaborate preparations have been made, promises to be one of the most successful of recent amateur events. The cast has been selected from a number of talented youngsters of Oakland, who have been rehearsing almost daily since the affair was started.

Little Miss Anita Marshall takes the part of Jack's mother in the comedy. Pearl Remington has the leading role as Jack and Little Alice Rosenthal plays Titania, queen of the fairies, in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a scene of "Jack and the Beanstalk."

These little ones have been before the Oakland public a number of times in singing and dancing performances and have shown exceptional talent and ability.

The play is to be given for the benefit of the aid society, and a large number of tickets are being sold.

THREE PEOPLE HELD FOR BEING DISORDERLY

Jack Snowball, John Harvey and Irene Brown were arrested yesterday at a lodging house conducted at Eighth and Webster streets, on the complaint of the proprietress of the place, Mrs. M. McCain. The trio were charged with disturbing the peace and Snowball had an additional charge of vulgar language placed against him.

The cases will be tried before Police Judge Mortimer Smith tomorrow morning. According to Mrs. McCain the trio took a room at her place, filled it with bottles of liquor and created such a disturbance that she had to have them arrested to gain peace and quiet in the place.

AMUSEMENT PARK IS REALITY RUMOR

Negotiations Pending for Sale of Buildings on Neptune Garden Tract.

ALAMEDA, Oct. 21.—Negotiations are pending for the sale of the old buildings on the Neptune Garden tract, recently purchased by Harvey M. Toy from the Alameda Land Investment Company. It has been persistently reported that the Southern Pacific is with Toy in the deal and that a great amusement enterprise, outvaluing anything hitherto attempted about the bay, is to be provided by the railroad company. The property is at Webster street station, convenient to Oakland, San Francisco and to all parts of Alameda. The tract contains several acres, with a splendid bay frontage. The old historic Wigwam, long the gymnasium of many of the world's greatest fighters, stands on the tract.

The Pacific Improvement Company has finished a comprehensive scheme of preliminary improvements on its big marsh acreage on either side of Webster street between Alameda and Oakland. Sloughs and sinks have been filled in and the lower portions of the marsh have been built up with dredged fill. The property is to be improved in the near future by a big system of wharves, docks and other water front equipment.

Dr. W. H. Hughes, owner of the old Harmon Hall property, is building a string of artistic bungalows on the site of the former hall, which was burned a few months ago. The hall was for over a quarter of a century the famous rallying place for Alameda society, especially for dancing parties and similar gatherings.

The taking of soundings on the post-office site at Central avenue and Pine street, has stimulated interest in property in this portion of the city. It is expected that actual building operations will be under way before the close of 1911.

The purchasing of most of the larger Alameda tracts by shrewd speculators and extensive home builders has drawn the attention of home builders to the favorable opportunities in the North Side, particularly in the neighborhoods of Willow and Grand stations on the Lincoln avenue local line. This section of the city was built up in the early days of the town, when lots almost large enough for farms were in vogue. There are many of these old properties which afford excellent opportunity for subdivision, allowing from three to a half dozen smaller lots. The growing scarcity of large tracts will soon force builders to take up these properties and the North Side will undoubtedly see within the next few years the largest volume of building in its history.

COMING OF A BANK INCREASES VALUES

Considerable Activity Is Noted About Gore at Broadway and Telegraph.

There was considerable excitement on upper Broadway Thursday morning when it became generally known that there was to be a bank erected at the intersection of Broadway and Telegraph avenue, and the result was a strong increase in the values of property in that vicinity, which previously had been soaring at an altitude that was almost Alpine.

A number of realty dealers sent out agents to the Gore tract, looking for north for the purpose of securing options on their parcels but there was not one of the agents that proved successful. All the agents reported to their superiors that there was not an owner who would listen to a proposition which was coupled with not less than from 25 to 30 per cent increase in the value of the property, a few days ago.

ALBANY BLOCK.

One of the benefits of this flurry will be experienced by Mrs. Helen McGowan of San Francisco, the owner of the Albany block, which is on the market and for which, two weeks ago, the owner refused a good round sum, although some of her friends are of the opinion that, before the developments of this morning, she would have been willing to accept from $225,000 to $250,000.

Early in the day there were rumors to the effect that the block in question had changed hands, and it was learned that it had come into the possession of Cohn Brothers, proprietors of the Bell Theater, who had bought it as a speculation and possibly with the purpose of transforming it into a theater, when their lease on the present quarters should come to a close.

The Cohns, however, denied that they had secured control of the structure. They admitted, however, that they had considered making a bid for the block, but decided to do so only after it was learned that the Wells-Fargo Express Company had a ten-year lease on the quarters, it occupies at the corner of Broadway and Fifteenth street. As they wanted the building for a longer term, they decided to lease the quarters for the most valuable part of the property for the purpose of catching the public eye. Accordingly, the structure so far as they were concerned, still remains in its present ownership.

Lessee Turner, who had charge of the building for some time, surrendered his lease a few days ago and is now engaged in renting rooms in the Realty Syndicate building.

AUSTRALIAN BOYS SEEK RIFLE COMPETITION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Opportunities to engage in rifle competitions while they are touring the United States will be sought by a party of boys from Australia, under the leadership of J. J. Simons. That is the principal object of their tour, but an incidental one is to educate the youths by travel.

As all the army and militia matches for the current year have been held, the only competition open to the cadets are those held by high schools and cadet organizations.

As the trip has the sanction of the Australian government, Ambassador Bryce asked the State department to extend to the boys any courtesy possible which would enable them to achieve the objects of their tour.

COTTON CROP IS RECORD BREAKER

16,000,000 Bales Is Maximum Put on This Year's Output
by Planters.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 21.—One of the largest, if not the largest, cotton crops in the history of the product is being gathered this year in the southern section of the United States. Only the final figures will prove the contention of the many experts that the crop will run from 14,000,000 to 16,000,000 bales. The more conservative contend the output will be below the former figure, yet the belief is general that the output is one of the largest, if not the largest, in the history of the crop.

So great is the crop that picking is being carried on by moonlight. The bright southern moon in the fall of the year turns the night into day and picking is greatly facilitated because of the absence of the heat of the day. Pickers are paid by piece work and all the negroes, physically able, go into the fields in early morning and remain at work until late into the night, or until the moon is obscured. This tremendous picking is crowding the ginneries, which are working night and day, yet despite this much of the cotton cannot be handled, the holdover being stored in the seed.

Many estimates are made as to the Texas crop, the total averaging around 4,000,000 bales. It is believed it will take $225,000,000 to finance the Texas crop.

If the United Railroads owned every foot of land in San Francisco city and county

And there were one house to every block

They couldn't make any money running street cars

If the Central California Traction Company owned all the soil of the great inland empire of the Sacramento Valley

And there was one family to each square mile

They couldn't make any money running an electric railway

It's nickels and two-bit pieces, in sufficient number, that yield the dividends for a railroad company

The railroad company bought immense tracts of land

Ran their railway through it and now offer the land for sale at much lower prices than any other land in California having transportation

The object being to quickly settle up the country in small tracts of 20 to 40 acres

And in this way bring in thousands of people who will travel back and forth to Sacramento and

Who will have great quantities of shipments to make, some big, some little

The Parnell Monument and the Mud Cabin.

An American traveler, who made a tour of Ireland recently, found two things to especially commend. He was gratified to note the disappearance of the mud cabin and the improved scale of comfort prevailing throughout the island, but was particularly pleased that a splendid monument had been erected in Dublin to Charles Stewart Parnell. He recalled the sad conditions which he found in Ireland fifteen years ago and contrasted them with the more hopeful conditions prevailing today. The year after his former visit—in 1898, to be exact—the project to erect a memorial to Parnell had its inception. The monument just completed and unveiled lifts its imposing column in a freer and happier land than the one Parnell was born in and which he labored to relieve from oppression and penury. It stands where it should, not among the mountains of Wicklow, where Parnell was born, but in the ancient capital of Ireland. It is the work of an Irish genius, Augustus St. Gaudins, and its artistic merit is in keeping with the character and public services of the man whom it commemorates.

But it is strange that the observant traveler before mentioned did not discern an intimate relation between the disappearance of the mud cabin and the erection of the noble monument to the great home rule leader. The mud cabin disappeared because men like Parnell lived and struggled to redeem their country from poverty, wretchedness and misgovernment. The monument in Dublin is a grateful recognition of the efforts of Parnell and his associates to lift the curse of alien and absentee landlordism from the land. Parnell spent his life in battling against the mud cabin and all it represented, and it is in harmony with the fitness of things that a magnificent memorial to him should be raised simultaneously with the disappearance of the mud cabin and the social and political conditions of which the mud cabin was the symbol.

What Ireland owes to the fight Parnell made against rack renting, land monopoly and absentee landlordism cannot be estimated. He organized and led a resistance to the evil influences which were depopulating the land and reducing the peasantry to hopeless poverty that made itself heard throughout the civilized world. He forced the British government and the land-owning aristocracy of Ireland in the court of public opinion. The landlords were compelled to show the titles by which they claimed to possess the land. The oppressions practiced by them or their agents were brought under review. Parnell brought all the world to view a nation in rags and misery and to understand the reason why. He made Irish landlordism stink in the nostrils of civilized humanity.

In Parliament he adopted the only course that promised to serve the end he sought. Parnell and the group he led refused to agree to anything or act with any party unless some Irish grievance was redressed. He obstructed the proceedings of Parliament till the business of government was halted. When asked why legislation was thus obstructed, Parnell replied: "A plundered, misgoverned and oppressed people demand that their wrongs be righted; they insist that the redress of the wrongs from which the Irish people are suffering be immediately redressed." That answer in justification touched the sense of justice in all mankind. While the inherent right of Parliament to transact business was universally conceded, Parnell forced upon the attention of the world the shocking conditions prevailing in the land of the shamrock. He forced the English press to discuss Irish affairs and Irish grievances. The whole miserable story of misgovernment in Ireland was dragged forth for the inspection of mankind. It revolted the sense of justice of the English people and compelled action.

One reform followed another. Concessions were at first grudgingly made, but gradually all parties in England came to recognize that the evils under which Ireland groaned must be remedied. The land tenure act put an end to rack renting and the horrors of eviction. The land purchase act providing for the gradual restoration of the land to the peasantry. Control of the county councils passed into the hands of the people, and other evils of minority and alien government were abolished. A general amelioration of conditions followed. The mud cabin went the way of the rackrenting landlord and the sordid, soring bailiff. Ireland now needs only relief from the burden of unjust taxation and a free hand to manage her own affairs to again be a happy and prosperous land.

The mud cabin is the symbol of what Ireland has lost. The monument to Parnell is a symbol of what she has gained. The disappearance of the one and the rise of the other are but evidences of the regeneration going on in the Emerald Isle. They are expressive of what was and what is, of the departing misery and the coming glory. Strange the American traveler did not discern that Parnell is honored with a monument because the mud cabin has passed in Ireland, likewise the mud cabin social condition. Parnell was sent to Kilmalmain jail for resisting the tyranny and cruelty of English laws. A hundred years before he would have been hanged or transported to the Antipodes, but when he called the world to witness the wrongs of his country and the injustice for which he suffered he gained a great moral victory over brute force. His monument is emblematic of the triumph he achieved. The departing mud cabin is the emblem of the wrongs and evils he strove to redress and abate.

The Justice Court Decision.

By a "strong arm" decision the Supreme Court has ruled that the justice courts remain in existence till the Legislature creates a minor judiciary pursuant to the constitutional amendment adopted at the recent election to perform the functions at present performed by the justice courts. But for the exigency that compelled it the decision would well deserve the appellation of "raw." It was made necessary by conditions over which the court had no control, but which public policy and the principles of justice demanded should be harmonized and adjusted. The court was therefore required to give a strained construction to the amendment that a remedy for crude, careless and reckless legislation might be provided. Superior Judge Willis of Los Angeles had decided that where there are two interpretations of the law the one doing the least harm and conferring the greatest benefit should be adopted. He accordingly decided that the justice courts continue in existence till the Legislature acts on the new amendment, but he did not disguise the fact that his decision was based more upon public expediency than upon the letter of the law. The Supreme Court took the same view for the same reason. The interests of the public at large and thousands of individuals would have been adversely affected had the Supreme Court declared the justice courts abolished, hence the court interposed its authority on rather flimsy grounds to avert something very like a disaster.

"BIG BUSINESS"

—LOS ANGELES DAILY TIMES.

Where There's a Will There's a Way.

State Controller Nye ought, in common justice to the irrigation interests, to give a ground for judicial interpretation of the objection he has raised to accepting bonds of irrigation districts as security for public money loaned to banks. The courts alone have the power to determine whether his point is well or ill-taken. He is not to be blamed for raising the objection, but surely he can find a way to have it judicially tested. In his opinion the law enacted last March is in conflict with the clause of the State Constitution providing for the loan of public funds to banks on certain prescribed conditions. That is all right, but how shall the matter be tested? Apparently his refusal to accept irrigation district bonds as valid security under the law cannot be made the subject of adjudication, but is not possible to arrange an agreed case that can be presented to the courts. He cannot be mandamus for refusing to accept the bonds, but he can be enjoined from accepting them, provided the Supreme Court should declare them to be unacceptable under the constitution. It is to be hoped that he can see his way clear to making way for an adjudication of this important question since it vitally affects a great public interest. At present the development of irrigation by community effort is sorely handicapped by the refusal of the State officers to accept bonds of irrigation districts as valid security for trust funds and public money loaned to banks. Surely he does not desire to become obstructionist in his attitude.

An impression prevails in some quarters that women will be required to pay poll tax as a condition for exercising the franchise. Such is not the fact. The poll tax law only applies to males. Of course the Legislature may hereafter require women to pay it, but at present the fair sex are exempt from paying poll tax. The poll tax should be either repealed or made to apply to the right to vote. In a number of States every voter who registers is required to produce a receipt showing he has paid poll tax for the current year. This provision of the law eliminates the floating vote.

Sacramento and Stockton are now connected by trolley line. Travelers can ride from Stockton to Oroville, Marysville or Chico, via Sacramento, on trolley cars. But no trolley line has yet connected Oakland with San Jose. The distance from Stockton to Sacramento is forty-eight miles; from Oakland to San Jose is forty-three miles. Oakland is three times the size of Sacramento and San Jose is larger than Stockton. San Francisco bay should be girdled with electric car lines, and the system radiating from Oakland should be connected with the system radiating from Sacramento.

Theodore Roosevelt has now come forward to declare, in effect if not in specific terms, that the Federal Courts should administer law and justice in accordance with prevailing public opinion; that judges should be brought under the direct control of the people and required to render decisions in response to popular judgment. He says it was wise in the first place to make the judiciary independent of the spirit of demos, but he thinks that time has passed. The Colonel is progressing. In Arizona he inveighed against the recall of the judiciary, but three days later he declared it was a good thing for California because of the peculiar local conditions existing here. Now he seems ready to swallow the recall proposition whole. At least, he proposes to apply popular pressure on Federal Judges, and broadly states that it is the duty of the courts to record the judgments of the people. Presently we shall be told that Jack Cade was a conservative and a great authority on constitutional law.

SOMETHING DONE

The story to the effect that Bob' Chanler has offered to give his wife, Lina Cavalleri, the sum of $70,000, on condition that she will consent to play her part in a divorce drama, will serve to start a lot of people to talking again about the evils of ill-considered marriages—particularly as the Astor-Force alliance is still fresh in the public mind.

It is more than likely, however, that the public is blind to its own interests when it protests against marriages among the sons of millionaire houses to women who seem quite obviously unfit for the duties of wifehood.

Every little while one hears that the son of a millionaire has escaped parental authority and has taken unto himself a wife, much in the same spirit in which he might order a dinner or hire a cook.

But all this is, in a way, a species of safety valve, to help in keeping the wealth of the country measurably scattered. It is not quite pertinent to say that such marriages are not sacred, and that they serve to tear down the structure of domestic morality. For a fact, they are not sacred; but as they concern people, in the main, to whom nothing is sacred—neither labor, nor sorrow, nor honest effort, nor human life—it seems probable that the sum total of sin is not increased by whatever they may do among themselves.

There is needed some scheme by which the surplus wealth of the cunning, the unscrupulous, the rapacious and those who were "first on the ground," and who believe that to be a fair reason for their monopolizing everything in sight, may be started back into the thousand channels of the world.

And the dissolute sons of a thousand millionaire fathers are doing their share in a needed work by getting large sums of money out of the parental coffers and starting them back into circulation.—St. Louis Times.

Men and Women

Craig Biddle at a dinner in Newport defended cosmetics and attacked scandal mongering in one neat epigram.

An elderly lady was criticizing certain young girls for using rouge and powder in what she deemed an immodest manner.

"But," said Mr. Biddle, "those girls were educated in France, and over there, as you know, cosmetics are looked on as necessary—the same as we look on bread and meat."

"Nevertheless," said the matron, "I have my suspicions about girls who paint like that."

"Well, as for me," the young man retorted, "I think it is far better for a lady to redden her own cheeks than to blacken other ladies' characters."—Philadelphia Times.

Of Miss Eleanor Sears, who is to marry Harold Vanderbilt, an amusing—and, perhaps, apocryphal—story circulates in Boston.

Miss Sears, as all the world knows, is extremely athletic. She rides very well indeed, and in her trim riding habit, seated astride her horse, she resembles a beautiful boy—a Ganyemede or a Narcissus.

Riding one day in the country, Miss Sears in her masculine habit had the misfortune to be thrown from her horse. The fall stunned her, and as she lay by the roadside a farmer hastened to her aid.

The farmer, raising her gently, touched a corset, and shouted in wild alarm to one of his men:

"Joe, Joe, get a doctor quick! Here's a young chap's ribs rummin' north and south instead of east and west."—Boston Herald.

THE CHINESE OUTBREAK

The disturbances in China, which began at Chengtu, the capital of the Province of Szechuen, and which have extended widely elsewhere, are probably to be correctly regarded as one of the symptoms of China's steadily developing sense of national importance and self-reliance. They had their origin not in enmity to foreigners per se, but rather in opposition to the government or to the government's policy concerning railroad building by foreigners. The opposition is directed chiefly against the "Four Nations" agreement for the construction of the Hukwang railroad, and it arose at Chengtu because that city was the headquarters of the provincial company which has begun the building of that part of the line which, under the new agreement, now becomes the American section. The inclination of the Chinese is to redeem and withdraw railroads and other concessions from foreign control and to reserve them all for domestic development, and this transfer of an enterprise from domestic to foreign hands was consequently exasperating. With those feelings and with that policy of the Chinese it is impossible not to feel some degree of sympathy, in theory. If China is to be an independent empire it must ultimately own and control its own resources and public works. That goes without saying. And the rising popular desire and determination to do so must be regarded as the manifestation of a commendable disposition, although the manifestation may be made in an improper way. There is, however, a grave question as to the financial and other ability of China to assume at once the full measure of such work, while there can, of course, be no question whatever as to her unavoidable obligation in law morals to fulfill whatever engagements with foreign promoters she may already have made.

LITERATURE AND LIFE

As the principal creator of the Indiana School of Literature, Booth Tarkington Esq., (A. M., Princeton), illustrated the ideal of "the gentleman from Indiana" in his recent assertion that whatever the immediate causes of disagreements between him and Mrs. Tarkington, they are all his fault.

This is so gentlemanly that it was to be expected, but when the fault turns out to be literary and artistic, those who have been fed on his ideals and other ideals in the best-selling fiction, must proceed to determine for themselves what the continuous absorption of ideal literature in all its varieties is to mean in their own lives.

According to poor Burns, the "true pathos and sublime" of life belongs to the realities of the struggle of the husband and father to "make a happy fireside clime for weans and wife." In Indiana and elsewhere, those who resort to the ideal to escape the real, must discover finally how far this is likely to increase pathos when they cannot avoid getting back to realities. If the contrasts of their sudden return from the fair regions of things as an artistic idealist can set them in tasteful order, "gets on their nerves," that pathetic situation may make interesting material for literature without even a probability of increasing the comfort of life.

Out of all the evidence we are now accumulating, we may decide finally how many books out of every hundred we are reading are merely hypnotic aids to day-dreaming, having nothing more to do with real comfort in life than dreams we can frame in sleep for ourselves, without literary help. Mr. Tarkington has had a powerful hypnotic influence in promoting day dreams of an ideal quality. Let us still hope for the best, even if it was "all his fault."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK AS AN EXHIBITION

Moving-picture men have recently caused some comment by picturing, for show in other cities, the ordinary life and activities of New York. It is a subject of perennial interest.

Merely as a matter of money, New York city's government "turn over" to a year more than $450,000,000, including bond refunding, operations, new bonds and local improvements for which property owners pay. This sum is more than half the entire assessment of Chicago.

Our expenses equal those of the next fifteen largest cities combined. For schools alone we use as much money in a year as the assessed value of Sacramento; $4,000,000 more than that of Omaha.

The gross debt of New York more than equals the interest-bearing debt of the United States, and its annual interest bill is $29,450,000—$8,000,000 more than the federal government's. The city spends $1,206,815.14 a year for storage in a horsehoeing. It has 446 miles of dock frontage to patrol. Its new aqueduct is costing $163,000,000, besides a $25,000,000 rock tunnel within the city, but that is not equal to a year's budget. It owns $140,000,000 worth of bridges. It spends for charities and allied purposes $10,000,000—the only item relatively lower than in London and in Berlin. There is more real estate exempt from taxation in New York city than in any other city, and the assessed value of any other American city, with Cincinnati and Newark thrown in.

Nearly 500 tons of babies are born in New York every year and its 800,000 pupils walking two by two at three-foot intervals would make a procession 227 miles long. The $78,014,622.30 it spends in salaries and wages in a year would buy 26,000 small homes at $300 each or 3,900,000 suits of $20 clothes; or enough five-cent bags of peanuts to reach end to end four times around the earth. New York has nearly as many temporary employees as the first army of occupation Italy will land in Tripoli. Its permanent force equals in number the entire population of Springfield, Mass., or Tacoma.

CROPS AND MONEY

In the last issue of the Saturday Evening Post there appears some comment on the usual relation of money and moving crops. The following quotation from that comment is pertinent:

"The reason for the higher Autumn rate is, of course, that money is then required to move the crops. The Eastern banks, in September and October, ship nearly two and one-half times as much currency as in the first half of the year. Chicago and St. Louis also are then shipping currency into the country at a brisk rate. Reserves fall; interest rates advance. Then, money, having moved the crops, speedily comes back, however. In January and February, the Eastern banks receive two and one-half times as much currency as they ship. Reserves rise; interest rates fall."

As a conclusion, the Post speculates as to whether or not Congress will have a little time during the coming winter to give some attention to the question of currency reform. Just what sort of reform the Post expects does not appear. We should expect, if it had made this matter clear, that, following the usual eastern demand, there would have been a call for the favorable consideration of the Aldrich plan. That seems to be in the air back in that section, and so far as there is expression of press sentiment about it, one would think it is the only currency reform in sight or discoverable.

And yet the Post does not see the necessity for shutting a good part of the country's money back and forth as the changing seasons, while it does see a great many good reasons, so it says, against the practice.

We simply have acquired the habit of creating money centers. We first produce the wealth that brings the money, and then we send the money to financial centers, whence we borrow as we need it for the development of further industry and the creation of more wealth. The money we get for the crops of one year we send to the same financial centers, and then we borrow it to move the crops of the following year. And so the process goes on to our loss and the money manipulators' gain.—Portland Telegram.

MAN AND HIS WAYS

Public and private opinion toward the faithful and hardworking janitors of flats and apartment buildings must undergo a change soon or there will be an upheaval to shake the country from Ojibwa to Puxatonia Junction. There is a limit beyond which these poor sufferers cannot be pressed, and that limit has now been reached. For instance:

A janitor in Boston has issued an edict his place for five years with all proper pride, was so humiliated by a tenant asking him to pull up a dumb waiter that he hanged himself to a beam in the cellar, leaving a widow and seven children behind him.

A janitor in Boston had issued an edict that no children should be born in the house. A reckless and obstinate mother presented her husband with twins and then calmly refused to throw them out of the window or send them away to an orphan asylum. The janitor stormed and threatened, but finding he could do nothing he sat down on a barrel of gunpowder and touched it off. His present whereabouts are unknown.

A janitor in Philadelphia objected to canary birds in the flats over which he held sway. One of the tenants objected to the objections of the janitor. She brought in a canary bird and stood guard over it with a shotgun. In maintaining his dignity the janitor was hit on the head with a bird cage and two hours later was found dead with a broken heart.

A janitor in Chicago had been in the habit for years of helping himself to the milk, rolls and morning papers left on the rear veranda of the kitchen over which he reigned. A sordid, soulless tenant caught him with the goods one morning and called him a purveyor. The poor janitor didn't exactly tumble to the drift of the tenant's conversation, but, believing the worst, and discerning no hope in the future, he let three different automobiles run over him and gather him to his fathers.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

COMMONERS AND GREATNESS

We have many draftsmen in the United States who draw better than Michael Angelo. Few graduates of American grammar schools write as illegible as Shakespeare. Most newspaper reporters average in syntax up to the average of Walter Scott. Some writers of magazine fiction write the worst fiction in a style that is as good as Addison's or Steele's, if not better. In England, in Australia, in Canada, and wherever else the English language is written and spoken, increasing scores, hundreds and thousands are being equipped thus for the highest expression.

In England, where a Thackeray revival is in progress, they wonder if they are using this equipment for producing greater work than Thackeray's. They think not, and wonder why. Lord Roseberry's answer is that Thackeray expressed greatness in his work because his work expressed what is common to humanity in all the lives of all its generations.

No doubt that is so nearly an answer when the question is of greatness in expression, that the artist who can draw no better than Michael Angelo may become great with all the human greatness he can absorb and express as he absorbs it. But the answer from Thackeray's own work goes further. He knew the worst that is common in all humanity and he did not cringe to it. When he found the worst with the greatest power, he did not compromise with it. He loved the best, and finding it as common as the worst, he "stood for" it in his own life, as he did in what he wrote of all other life. The failures and calamities which expressed the best in the spirit of humanity, he met him nobler than the highest success which compromise it or sacrifice it.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

POLITICS AS SEEN BY CULLOM TOLD IN HIS BOOK

Senator Brands Roosevelt the "Master Law Enforcer."

TAFT NOT ENJOYING OFFICE, HE DECLARES

Writes of New Era in Customs
Followed by the U. S.
Senate.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The first number of Senator Cullom's book of personal reminiscences has appeared here, and has aroused considerable interest because of the viewpoint from which it regards the issues that have been a part of the political life in which he has engaged in the last fifty years.

Colonel Roosevelt is regarded by Senator Cullom as the "master law enforcer," and is characterized as good material for a Supreme Court justice—as to his Presidential caliber, the book intimates that probably President Taft has not enjoyed the position.

LaFollette and what he terms insurrection are described as the creation of a third party, and he can see no leader of the Republican party in the Senate since Senator Aldrich's withdrawal.

ACCOMPLISHED MUCH.

Of the Roosevelt administration Senator Cullom says:

Colonel Roosevelt accomplished more in his second term than any of his predecessors; more laws were enacted—laws of more general benefit to the people—and above all, his administration enforced all laws on the statute books as they never had been enforced before. The Sherman anti-trust law was a dead letter until Roosevelt instructed the Attorney-General to prosecute its violators. He will go down in the history of his country as the most remarkable man of his day.

The Senator, in saying that he doubts that Taft has enjoyed his Presidency, adds:

"I myself always have thought he would have made one of our greatest chief justices had he been appointed to that position."

He denies that President Taft was responsible for the "duck and drake" received in 1910, charging that misfortune to a weariness on the part of the people to Republican prosperity and the agitation of the newspapers over the Aldrich-Pauley affair.

Senator John C. Spooner's resignation he attributes to Spooner's embarrassment at the growth in his state of what the writer calls "LaFolletteism."

A new era in the customs of the Senate followed the entry to that chamber of Senator LaFollette, says the book. This is pointed out in more ways than one. Besides marking the birth of insurrection was the opening of a new day for the young man in the Senate, Senator Cullom thinks.

"Indeed," relates the book, "while formerly the spectacle of a young senator rising to make a speech before the close of his second year in the Senate was unusual, it recently has come to be remarked upon if a man remains two months without enjoining the Senate as to its duty toward the world."

PLOT TO KILL ZAYAS
TOLD TO PRESIDENT

HAVANA, Oct. 21.—A committee of leading Zayistas composed of two Senators and nine Representatives called on President Gomez and officially notified him that they possessed information of a conspiracy to assassinate Vice-President Zayas, General Pino Guerra and Congressman Campos Marquetti. The last named is the most prominent negro Zayist.

The callers warned the President that if any of these men lost their lives during the coming political campaign they would hold the government responsible. The President replied that the committee knew nothing of the alleged plot, but he had heard rumors of conspiracies in which members of the committee present were supposed to be implicated. However, he had paid no attention to such reports and he hoped the committee would repose similar confidence in the government. In closing he gave the committee earnest assurance of his determination that the approaching elections should be conducted with absolute fairness, his own attitude being that of perfect impartiality.

THOUSANDS OF COMMUTERS ARE WAITING FOR OPPORTUNITY TRIBUNE'S ARROWS POINT THE WAY; BETTER FOLLOW 'EM

Does an arrow point to you in this picture of commuters? THE TRIBUNE will give you free theater tickets if it does.

If You're in the Picture and an Arrow Points You Out, There Are Two Free Tickets Waiting for You at the Tribune's Main Office

Follow the leader—nobody follows him these piping days.

But they follow the arrow. Thousands of commuters are following it. Get in and be led by it yourself. Grasp opportunity around the neck and hold on. Be up and doing.

Each issue of THE TRIBUNE will tell you how to do it. Full directions with every paper.

Look above this, at the top of the page. You see a picture. It is of a group of people. They are going somewhere. They are commuters.

Also in the photograph are five arrows that point out to your gaze five persons. These are lucky persons. They are going to get something for walking. Everybody walks, especially a commuter. It is nothing to them. Therefore these arrows lead to lucky persons—five of 'em—are going to get something for nothing. Q. E. D.

These five will come quickly to THE TRIBUNE's main business office at Eighth and Broadway. There they will be greeted by B. A. Forster, secretary-treasurer of this newspaper.

They will point out themselves in the picture. Mr. Forster will identify them. Then he will go to his trusty desk and bring forth ten theater tickets. Two apiece will he give to the identified ones.

The tickets are for "The Commuters." That is a play. It is a clever play, full of laughs and with a reputation for entertainment that seldom has been equaled. It is coming to the Macdonough theater for a whole week, beginning tomorrow.

You see what has happened, don't you? A commuter has found an arrow pointing to him in the picture. He has simply gone to THE TRIBUNE office and assured Mr. Forster that he is the man (or she is the woman) printed and he has given him (or her) two tickets to "The Commuters." It has cost nothing.

Is there anything easier in the world? There is not.

Look for the arrow. Follow it. Come to THE TRIBUNE. There you shall be rewarded.

THIS DUCK HUNT WAS BIG FIZZLE

Captain Lynch Found Little Chance in Contra Costa to Use Arsenal.

An arsenal of guns and munitions of war was organized by Captain of Police F. J. Lynch for a little trip to the country to shoot ducks. While other members of the department were enjoying summer vacations Captain Lynch labored diligently at his desk, handling the day watch, providing food and lodging for the dozens in the city jail, keeping the automobiles and the card index systems of the departments in shape and generally acting as steward in chief of the day watch.

A few days ago Captain Lynch obtained leave to go to Pittsburg, Contra Costa county, to visit Jailer John Fahey on his ranch. They were to go duck shooting together.

Under advice from his conferees, Captain Lynch loaded up with muskets, rifles, shotguns and other firearms and several hundred rounds of cartridges. He was off for a record-breaking duck hunt.

Yesterday morning patrolmen of the department who happened to pass the home of Captain Lynch were amazed to see their superior officer, clad in overalls, with paint brush in hand, putting a new coat of color on the front steps.

"We thought you were duck shooting," they chimed in chorus.

"There isn't a duck in Contra Costa county," returned Captain Lynch. "I saw only two squirrels, and they ran like poisoned pups."

"How did you get home without the officer at Sixteenth street seeing you come in?" asked the patrolmen.

"I didn't want to be seen, and I came by way of the Santa Fe," answered the captain.

Captain Charles Beck, who holds down the night watch, was overjoyed to hear the news, as he has been doubling up on his work in the absence of his brother officer. Captain Lynch declares that in future he will eschew duck shooting.

240,000 BUNDLES SHINGLES ABOARD

Steamship Missourian Is Receiving Monster Cargo On Puget Sound.

SEATTLE, Oct. 21.—The American Hawaiian freight steamship Missourian, now in port, is taking on the largest single shipment of shingles ever exported from Puget sound. The shingles came on the schooner Blakeley No. 1, from Bellingham. The shipment consisted of 240,000 bundles or 6,000,000 shingles, and is believed to be the largest shingle order ever handled.

The Blakeley No. 1 is 180 feet long and 38 feet wide, and when she arrived she was laden with shingles to a depth of 26 feet, making 123,500 cubic feet of the wooden roof-covering.

The huge shipment was originally to have been loaded on board the Missourian at Bellingham, but owing to the heavy cargo offering here the company was forced to cancel the vessel's call at the up-bound port.

TURNERS TO DEDICATE NEW HALL WITH FAIR

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—Marking their entry into the fine new $75,000 Turner hall, on Sutter street, between Devisadero and Broderick, the Turners of San Francisco will give a fair from October 23 to November 5 in the big edifice dedicated to health and culture.

German-Americans, sharpshooters, singers and affiliated societies will assist, a parade from the old quarters to the new being a spectacular feature of the dedication exercises.

The seven days' fair will commemorate the fifty-ninth anniversary and celebrate the opening of the new home of the San Francisco Turnverein.

This will be a "grand fair" in every sense of the word, not a fair consisting of booths, although booths there will visualize the opening of the great Panama canal.

To Americans a visit will in interest almost equal a trip to European shores. Many quaint old world pleasure resorts will be reproduced, from the costumed maidens who serve refreshments to the antiquated serving mugs and decorations; to Europeans it will recall scenes from home.

HUSKY 'FRESHIES' ARE CAP-WEARERS

Their Brawn Is Explanation for Non-interference of the Sophomores.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Oct. 21.—An unparadiseable freshman sin, that of wearing a cap on the campus, has called forth more-in-sorrow-than-in-anger expression from Edwin Einstein, editor of the Daily Californian, the leading student publication. He designates the non-interference by sophomores with the pernicious practice of freshman cap-wearing as "carelessness." The infringement of college tradition now noticeable, it is explained, is due to the fact that the cap-wearers are freshmen of the husky, cap-defending type. Says Einstein: "Judging from the reports, there are numerous husky freshmen wearing caps about the campus, apparently without molestation from the second-year men. While the seniors hate to interfere in the mere technical matter of disciplining the freshmen, they do consider it careless on the part of the sophomores to allow this infringement of California's traditions. Such was the spirit of a resolution adopted last night at senior singing. Get busy, sophomores! The big, muscular freshmen have no more right to wear caps than the meek and timid ones."

Beaser, a dentist of the city who is a brother of the missing college man, received a letter from two miners who were working near Beaser's camp in the canyon, and who were among the last to see Scott. Their camp was located about two miles from Scott's and they did not leave the vicinity until after the disappearance of the young man and the search was started. In the letter addressed to the Fresno dentist, the miners stated that they knew nothing of the whereabouts of Beaser and that the last time they saw him he was making no remarks about leaving the canyon. DROPS FROM SIGHT. Last week Dr. Beaser received a letter from a college chum of his who resides in Virginia City, Nevada. The writer stated that he had received a letter from Scott the first of August in which he stated that he intended to leave the canyon. It has also been learned that young Beaser had been found in the east of the canyon, but his friends are of the opinion that he had left the canyon in his right mind. The letter addressed to the Fresno dentist, the miners stated that they knew nothing of the whereabouts of Beaser and that the last time they saw him he was making no remarks about leaving the canyon.

Dr. Beaser is a noted specialist on the subject, and he was informed that his brother might at the present time be wandering about the country. The search for the body in the wilderness of the canyon has not been abandoned and a reward of $5000 for any information concerning the whereabouts of the young man still stands.

OAKLAND PUBLIC MUSEUM IS JUST ONE YEAR OLD

Curator C. P. Wilcomb Tells How 55,580 Persons Have Received Pleasure and Profit From Visiting Institution

(By C. P. WILCOMB, Curator.)

October 21 marks the close of the first year's activities of the Oakland Public Museum, and as such is a fitting time for a survey of its work. That the museum has proved of both pleasure and profit to the citizens of Oakland is a universal verdict, and the city has every reason to be proud of the character of the exhibits and the manner of their display and maintenance.

The museum contains fourteen rooms filled with rare and interesting natural and historical objects and affords delightful entertainment as well as instruction for all. It is the property of and is maintained entirely by the municipality. During this first year of its existence 55,580 people have inspected its collections and enjoyed its privileges, and 146 individuals and firms have contributed specimens to the number of 9083.

23,117 OBJECTS EXHIBITED.

Extensive accessions have been made to nearly every department, both by donations of public-spirited citizens and by collecting expeditions conducted by the curator. At the close of the year the collections aggregate 23,117 objects.

It is the desire of the board of directors to make the museum valuable as a means of education. To this end, first, the exhibits on display or in storage may be inspected by students in systematic manner, while the curator and assistants are always prepared to explain the articles or direct the study of them; second, formal lectures are given to school children; third, loans of exhibits are made to the public schools or to others for educational purposes.

A special feature of the work of the museum is the system of lectures to school children, which was inaugurated soon after the opening in October, the Oakland museum being the first on the coast to undertake such work.

Through the co-operation of Superintendent McGowan, the principal of the city schools, classes are brought to the museum by their teachers and talks are given by the lecturer, Mrs. D. W. DeVeer, on subjects previously arranged for by the teachers. The classes are seated on benches and folding chairs, placed in the exhibition rooms for the occasion and the lectures are illustrated constantly by specimens from the museum collections.

FORCEFUL TEACHING.

The method of teaching is thus made exact and forceful because objects handled are seen by the children while they are being explained, leaving a much more definite impression upon their minds than if the same objects were merely heard or read about; and it is found that the teachers unanimously agree as to the value of the museum, while the children are entertained as well as instructed.

The lecture work is to be made a permanent feature, and its scope will be enlarged as far as possible. An appropriation has been made by the city for an auditorium where more pupils can be accommodated and where public lectures in general may be given. Work on the auditorium will soon be under way.

During the twelve months 98 lectures were given and a total number of 3638 school children attended.

The curator attended six collecting expeditions among the California Indians in different sections of the state, which resulted in the addition to the collection of much valuable ethnological material of a kind that is nearly obsolete, and most of which has been already gathered and absorbed into museums and private collections of the east and Europe, or has disappeared into the graves of the possessors, for the custom continues with the old Indians of destroying or burying with the deceased all personal belongings. And the younger Indians no longer manufacture or use articles of a primitive character. Hence, it behooves us to lose no opportunity to secure all that is possible before the last of it vanishes forever.

FACTOR IN PROGRESS.

The great influence, encouragement and continued public-spirited attitude of our mayor, Hon. Frank K. Mott, has been a strong factor in the progress, development and success of the institution. His unwavering aim has been to provide for the public good, and especially to promote the educational feature.

The monthly attendance of visitors is shown in the following table:

FIRST LINER USING OIL IS IN PORT

New "Toller" Proves Worth of Petroleum as Ship's Fuel.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The first of the oil-propelled ocean liners, which promises to revolutionize traffic, reached America last week. Some thing of the transformation which will be worked in the appearance of ships is shown in the new boat. The "Toller," the new ship, made several successful trial trips on the other side, and in crossing the Atlantic behaved well. Throughout the trans-Atlantic trip the "Toller" burned 1.75 tons of oil a day, only one-sixth as much coal as would ordinary engines of the same size.

Another economy is the elimination of coal heavers. There is no steam on the boat, the cabins are heated by hot water. To the landlubber the chief interest in the oil-burner is the absence of smokestacks and masts, and except for two low masts at the prow and stern the upper deck is unbroken. The "Toller" will be followed by two 900-ton oil-burning trans-Atlantic liners of the Hamburg-American line next year.

GERMAN WARSHIPS HAVE NETS TO CATCH TORPEDOES

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—The Navy Department has succeeded in improving the torpedo net for the protection of warships to such an extent that all the newer vessels are to be provided with it as soon as possible. Hitherto few ships have been protected in this way, as it has been found that speed was diminished by nets, and also that the old style of net was not available at all while the vessel was under way.

A recent invention made by a naval officer, whose improvement has been kept secret, has overcome these difficulties, and permits the vessels to steam at undiminished speed while the net is fully spread.

WM. ROCKEFELLER SUFFERS NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

LONDON VISIT FAILS TO MEND

Hand Shakes Like Leaf as He Leaves Ship and Throat Is Swollen.

Return From Abroad Is Not Kept Secret as Was His Departure.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — William Rockefeller, the active head of the Standard Oil Company, returned aboard the steamship Campania from a three days' visit to London. His trip did not do him the good that was hoped. His voice is extremely hoarse and his nervousness has not improved at all. There was none of the secrecy on his return that marked his departure, October 4.

With him were Mrs. Rockefeller, Dr. Walter F. Chappell, his physician; the doctor's daughter, Miss Louise Chappell, and Miss Harriet S. D. Anderson, his nurse. He was met at the pier by his son, W. G. Rockefeller, and as soon as his baggage had been inspected he entered his automobile and left for Tarrytown. As he stood in his stateroom with Dr. Chappell and asked and answered questions, Rockefeller from time to time grasped the door in an effort to conceal the trembling of his hand. As soon as he let go his hand shook like a leaf.

GOUT IN THE THROAT.

"It is a nervous tremor that is characteristic of the Rockefeller family," explained Dr. Chappell. "Mr. Rockefeller's mother was just the same and his son is also slightly bothered."

Dr. Chappell stated that Mr. Rockefeller has a severe attack of gout in the throat which he said was a painful swelling at the top of the vocal chords.

The Standard oil head was told that the Campania's passengers imagined that Dr. Chappell was his son-in-law.

"No, he isn't," he whispered, smiling. "I am his companion. He was going to London to see a patient and I did not want him to leave me. I thought the sea trip would do me good."

SEA GOOD FOR LUMBAGO.

"A sea trip will cure anything. If you ever get lumbago, go to sea. Perhaps the ocean won't cure mal de mer, but I am never troubled that way."

Rockefeller said he did not discuss business in England. He was kept so busy running after Dr. Chappell to theaters that he did not have time, he added.

"I saw 'Peggy' and 'The Quaker Girl' shows that I enjoyed immensely. There was a girl called Phoebe in 'The Quaker Girl' and she was fine. I'd like to bring the whole cast over. Phoebe is my girl. She is lovely."

TALKS OF ACTRESSES.

"Yes," interpolated Dr. Chappell. "Phoebe was smiling all the time. I met her in the street next day and she surely has the laughing, dancing eye. Mr. Rockefeller enjoyed the show immensely."

Gertie Miller is playing the stellar role in "The Quaker Girl." Phoebe has the minor role of the maid.

Then Rockefeller asked if the railroad strike on the Harriman lines was over and was told that it had been overshadowed by the Italian-Turkish war, which in turn has given way to the excitement over the world's championship baseball series.

"Baseball takes the place of everything," Phoebe said with a gasp of exclamation. "I'm glad to be back. Think I can get to the game today?"

GLAD TO BE BACK.

He was told that if any game was played it would be in Philadelphia.

"Oh, pshaw," he exclaimed, "what a pity."

"Andrew Carnegie returned from Europe last night and said he would like to be a reporter, Mr. Rockefeller. Would you like to follow suit?"

"No," he replied. "I'd rather own the paper," he replied.

"Well, we'll run it for you," declared a reporter.

"I'll remember that," replied Mr. Rockefeller. "Send me your own dresses. Stranger things than that have happened."

Gas Main Breaks and Worker Is Asphyxiated

Emile Thiemann Killed While Making Connection in Open Street in Berkeley.

BERKELEY, Oct. 21. — Emile Thiemann, 45 years of age, a gas worker for the Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company, was asphyxiated this evening through the breaking of a gas main at the corner of Telegraph avenue and Baucroft way.

Thiemann was making a connection from the main to the parish house of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. He accidentally drove his pick into the main and the volume of gas burst through.

Thiemann fell in the street, overcome, and was unconscious by the time a passerby had removed him from the danger. He was carried to the office of Dr. A. D. Bailey on Telegraph avenue, where attempts to resuscitate him failed. The body was taken to the Berkeley morgue.

Thiemann was a native of Scandinavia and lived at 527 Olive street, Oakland.

The previous record of 125 feet was held by the Octopus.

TRAFFIC AGENTS TO BE CITY'S GUESTS VISITORS TO BE ENTERTAINED AT LUNCH

W. R. ALBERGER (top) and EDWARD F. DELGER, who will aid in entertaining Los Angeles Traffic Men today. Photos Vaughn & Fraser.

Sightseeing Trip Will Be the Feature of an Outing

Members of the Los Angeles Traffic Association to the number of more than 100 will today be the guests of the California Association of Traffic Agents, with headquarters in San Francisco, in a sight-seeing tour of the Oakland Traction Company's lines, followed by luncheon at the Key Route Inn. The tour has been arranged through the efforts of W. W. Keith, general traffic manager of the traction company and Key Route lines, and the visitors will be received in Oakland by Mayor Mott and representatives of the Oakland and Berkeley Chambers of Commerce.

The Los Angeles traction men, who have been meeting in conference in San Francisco the latter part of this week, will leave the city, according to the program arranged and announced by M. J. Lindsay, president of the California association, at 10 o'clock this morning, via the Key Route. Arriving at the Berkeley station, Shattuck and University avenues, at 10:35, the party will be met by the Berkeley councilmen and members of the Chambers of Commerce of both that city and Oakland.

After a short reception the visitors will be escorted to special traction company cars, in which they will then be taken to points of interest in the east side of the bay, including Northbrae and Piedmont Park. At the latter place an inspection of the art gallery will be made, while at Northbrae another informal reception will be held at which will be present members of the local traffic bodies.

Upon the completion of the sight-seeing tour the visitors will be taken to the Key Route Inn, where Mayor Mott will be waiting to greet them, and where at 12:30 a luncheon will be served. Short talks will be made by representatives of various civic bodies during the course of the luncheon, following which the return trip will be made to San Francisco.

'Honorable' Tabooed By Oregon Official

Un-American and Unfitting, Says Secretary of State in His Announcement.

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 21. — Because he considers the prefix un-American and unfitting in a country where all men are theoretically equal, Ben Olcott, Oregon's new secretary of state, today forbade use of the word "honorable" in addressing any person to whom correspondence is directed from his office. This takes in all the numerous departments from which in the past thousands of Oregon citizens have been invited with the prefix that Olcott says has finally grown to be entirely meaningless. To emphasize his aspersions on the abuse of "honorable" Olcott quotes in full in his official written order Webster's definition of the word.

Gen. Zapata Demands Surrender of Cuatla

Near El Mange the rebels fired upon a passenger train from the south, killing Postal Agent A. Mateos. A few miles further on near Cascada the locomotive plunged through a burned bridge, killing the engineer.

PENSION BILL NOT OPPOSED BY TAFT

Secretary Hilles Writes Southern California Veteran, Hands Off.

Senator Lodge Did Not Consult Chief Executive About Attitude.

PASADENA, Oct. 21. — President W. H. Taft was placed on record today as having had nothing to do with the defeat of the Sulloway pension bill in the United States Senate in a letter received by Jason J. Shepherd, commander of the Southern California Veterans' Association, from Charles D. Hilles, the President's secretary.

The letter was in response to one written by Commander Shepherd to Mr. Taft under date of October 18, the day the President visited the city. Hilles' letter follows:

"The President was in no sense responsible for the attitude of Senator Lodge toward the Sulloway bill. He was not consulted by Senator Lodge and had no knowledge of the intention of Senator Lodge to make the motion which resulted in its defeat. The President has a judicial training and reputation which prevents his passing on questions before they are presented to him for consideration."

The letter was dated at Los Angeles, October 17, but the postmark was Salt Lake City, October 18.

LETTER TO PRESIDENT.

Shepherd's letter to the chief executive follows:

"Dear Mr. Taft: There are many veterans of the Civil war here and in Los Angeles who desire a statement from you regarding pensions. They feel as thousands do throughout the country that at the time the Sulloway bill passed the House, 312 to 62, and then went to the Senate where there was long delay, that it was not passed upon favorably because you were opposed to the bill. If they are wrong in their supposition it certainly ought to be made known. The old soldiers with their relatives and friends throughout the United States can easily poll a vote of 3,000,000 and I think it the part of wisdom to seriously consider the matter."

'Better Be Vulgar Than Bore People'

Advice Given to Woman Suffrage Convention by Quaker City Delegate.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 21. — Militant—even vulgar—methods were urged on delegates to the National American Woman's Suffrage convention here this afternoon by Mrs. Mary Winsor of Philadelphia.

"Whatever you do," she advised earnestly, "don't be tiresome. Better be vulgar."

When the delegates laughed incredulously she reiterated the advice.

"Yes, 'indeed,' she said, "this is a vulgar age. Be loud, be yellow, be anything to be picturesque. Better go to extremes than to bore people."

Navel Orange Crop a Record-Breaker

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21. — According to estimates made today by citrus shippers of Los Angeles, the year's navel orange crop is to be a record-breaker.

The entire citrus output of the season is expected to total 45,000 cars. The crop is about two weeks late this year, as the early navel season began to move before the end of the next week.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Oct. 21. — The body of Eugene Ely, the aviator who was killed at Macon, Ga., arrived in Davenport this afternoon, accompanied by his widow, father and stepmother. The body was taken to Williamsburg, Iowa, his birthplace, where the funeral will be held tomorrow.

The net earnings were $11,140,033, and dividends amounted to $9,599,286.

CALIFORNIAN IS TANGLED IN SUIT

Sacramento Girl in London Shields Accused American Wife of Britisher.

Don't Marry a Foreigner, Says Woman Charged With Having Affinity.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The divorce suit of George Sherwood Foster, the artist, in which Thomas Beecham, the opera impresario, is named as co-respondent, is attracting much attention in London. It is the second in the last few months in which American wives figure conspicuously, the other one being the case of Irene Osgood, the American novelist, against Robert Sherrard.

Mrs. Foster was formerly Maud Tripp, a daughter of Harrison Tripp of Richmond, one of the oldest families in the South.

Another American girl whose name is mentioned prominently in the testimony as an alleged co-betwixt of Mrs. Foster and Beecham is Catherine Heyman of Sacramento, Cal., who is a well known pianist in both New York and Europe.

QUARRELS WITH MOTHER.

Mrs. Tripp, mother of the defendant, resides in Belgrave Square, near the home of Foster, but Mrs. Foster is said to have quarreled with her mother, and she is now among the families in the South.

At her residence, Bryanston Square, where she received a TRIBUNE correspondent at the close of yesterday's hearing, she looked pale and was from the ordeal and declared she was on the point of a nervous breakdown. She said:

"My case is only an addition to a long and wretched list of bright American girls who have married Englishmen, only to find out their terrible mistake immediately after the ceremony."

"Look at me, see how ill I appear. Well, it is the result of ten years of dreadful persecution by this man, yet he has nerve enough to charge, as in the case of Irene Osgood, that I tried to relegate him to the position of a servant in the house."

DIFFERENT TEMPERAMENTS.

"I don't mind if my case should be cited as an example to American girls to hesitate before entering into marriage with Europeans, more especially with Englishmen, for it is always sure to be a case of a totally different temperament."

"My husband's charge is nonsense. All I did was to rebel against the position he wished me to occupy in his home, which was worse than a servant, being a mere slave."

Miss Heyman declared she would stand by her friend throughout the present litigation, and denied ever having intentionally aided as the go-between between Mrs. Foster and Beecham and declared she believed Mrs. Foster innocent of any wrongdoing.

Magazine to Begin War on Hitchcock

Impeachment Proceeding or Appeal to Taft Suggested by U. S. Judge.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — Impeachment proceedings against Postmaster General Hitchcock or an appeal to President Taft are the two remedies suggested by Judge Ward in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today to the officers of the American Review of Reviews Company in their application for an injunction to prevent the Postmaster-General from sending two magazines west by express, while Review of Reviews is sent part of the way by freight.

One of the magazines that is rushed to its destination, according to the complaint of the Review of Reviews, is the Outlook, of which Theodore Roosevelt is contributing editor. Hitchcock was appointed to office by President Roosevelt. The other magazine is the Literary Digest.

San Franciscan Ends Her Life in New York

Mrs. Edward Friedman Sends Her Children Away and Commits Suicide.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — Mrs. Edward Friedman, wife of a feather importer and whose home is in San Francisco, committed suicide today at the home of her sister, Mrs. Louis Assenheim. Mrs. Friedman, who was 45 years of age, came here from the west two weeks ago with her two children. Her trip, according to her sister, was due to domestic difficulties which caused the breaking up of the Friedman home in San Francisco. Since coming here, Mrs. Friedman had been despondent. Today she sent her two children to a moving picture show and while her sister was in another part of the house she shot herself. Death was instantaneous.

2500 WOMEN REGISTER IN SAN DIEGO COUNTY

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 21. — Registration of voters for the bond election to be held November 14 closed last night. County Clerk Butler, who at first refused to register women, but changed his mind when he found that other county clerks were enrolling them, estimates that 2500 women have been registered here this week.

ALLEGED FOOTPADS TAKEN SOON AFTER ATTEMPTED HOLDUP OF BARKEEPER.

Robbers Flee When Victim Begins Shooting With Revolver.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21. — The quickest-detective capture on record was made tonight when the three alleged robbers, who held up Charles Kohler, a bartender, employed by the Grand Central hotel, were hauled into the city prison by one of the police men, fifteen minutes after a report of the affair had reached police headquarters.

The circumstances surrounding the attempted robbery of Kohler and the taking into custody of the alleged footpads were most exciting.

The bartender had been home for supper and had left his house at 55 Keating street to return to work. He was walking along Tenth street, near Howard, when three men sprang upon him from a vacant lot and attempted to seize hold of him. He drew back from them, pulled a revolver from his pocket, fired two shots. This so frightened the highwaymen that they fled hurriedly and Kohler stepped into a nearby store and telephoned to police headquarters.

CAPTURES THREE MEN.

Detective Sergeant Reagan was sent out in the automobile and immediately began a search for the robbers, who he had seen. As he passed through he heard some one say, "By George, I think that fellow shot me in the leg."

Coming nearer, Reagan saw the outlines of three men. He sprang suddenly in the midst of them, handcuffed two of them together and held the third man at bay with his revolver. At this juncture other officers ran up and the men were taken to the city prison, where they were identified by Kohler as the footpads. They gave their names as Maurice McAlister, alias Richard Smith; Charles Williams and Michael Kennedy. The last named, the police say, is a well-known jockey.

Plays With Matches; Girl Fatally Burned

Five-Year-Old Child Sets Her Dress On Fire and Entire Body Is Seared.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21. — While playing with matches in her home at 2727 Army street, Mary Lydon, aged five years, set fire to her clothing and was seriously, if not fatally, burned late this afternoon. The child, who had been playing with matches on a table and had been striking them one after the other, at length one of the tiny sparks caught her white dress and before other occupants of the house could extinguish the blaze, she was completely enveloped.

At the mission hospital, Dr. Miller found that her entire body had been burned in a way that makes it seem hardly likely that she can recover.

South Dakota Host For President Taft

Secretary Hilles Is Told of the Political Situation in That State.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Oct. 21. — On the trip to Deadwood, South Dakota, President Taft was accompanied by Governor Vessey, United States Senator Gamble, Congressman Martin and Burke and United States Marshal Seth Bullock. Secretary Hilles told that while the political atmosphere in South Dakota was far from clear at present, Taft had a chance to secure at least four of the ten delegates to the Republican national convention next year which the state will have under the new congressional apportionment.

Hilless was informed of a strong sentiment for Senator LaFollette throughout the state.

King Baseball Steps Down From Throne This Afternoon After Successful Season

Portland Baseball Team: Coast League Champions, 1911

Here are the Beavers, with one or two exceptions, which team has won the pennant of the Pacific Coast League after a most strenuous campaign—
The two figures at the end, Buddy Ryan on the left was a tower of strength with the willow, driving home many runs, and making several himself, while Bill Steen on the right held the enemy safe in most of the games he pitched.

Holland and Petrosky Should Put Up Scrap Well Worth Seeing; Crusher Should Be Put on Four-Round Fakers

By BERT LOWRY.

REAL live pugilistic timber is scarce in this part of the grand old U. S. A.—in fact, it is scarce in lots of other places, too, and the followers of the padded mitt men are ready and willing for anything. Outside of the coming show at the West Oakland Club next Tuesday evening, the Wheelmen's proposed bouts and Jim Griffin's night of boxing the later part of the month, the game of fisticuffs is mighty dead hereabout.

Priz Hollan, the Spokane middleweight who tangles with Sailor Ed. Petrosky in the ten round main event, is filled with confidence that he can take the measure of the man of the seas and would like very much to stake a few or many dollars on his chances.

As the sailor has a following that think him a world beater from tap of going to finish the Holland match, should have a little or no trouble finding some one anxious to cover his wad.

That the scrap should be a good one is evident, and the two boys are of a world beater, both are of that type of fighter who like to slam and bang all the time they are in the ring.

BOTH HAVE A GOOD PUNCH.
Both are fairly shifty on their feet and both have what the fans like to see—a good, hard punch. Last Friday when the two boys met in a four round bout over the bay the fans were divided as to which was the better and friends of both are claiming the verdict as well as the principals.

Tuesday evening they will go ten rounds, at least that is what the bout is scheduled for now both should have plenty of time in which to prove who is who.

The balance of the card is the pick

SMALL CROWD WITNESS DOWNFALL OF OAKS AT CAPITAL

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 21.—The home team spoiled what threatened to be a no nothing game in favor of the Oaks this morning by scoring two runs in the sixth inning. Thereafter they had things pretty much their own way and went romping all over the lot, landing on Platter's curves almost at will and pounding out one in the seventh and two in the eighth. The best the visitors could do was to score one in the fourth. Thereafter they retired to the bench. In one, two, three rounds.

WHEELMEN CHANGE THEIR PLANS.
The busy matchmaker of the Oakland Wheelmen club will stage several bouts on the evening of the 24th at the club rooms at Piedmont. He has switched his plans and instead of matching the winner of the Holland-Petrosky match with Joe Thomas will stage Johnny Frayne and Lew Powell in the main event of the evening.

Sometime ago these two met and put up a fairly good bout, but Johnny Frayne didn't do himself justice that night and had looked for the chance to again meet the sorrel topped pug. He has been under the wing of Al. White, for some little time now and is taking excellent care of himself. That he can still fight was demonstrated in his recent bout at Salt Lake against Matty Baldwin, for any man who can stand Baldwin win for ten rounds is some fighter.

As to the balance of the card it has not as yet been made up, but the matchmaker promises to get the best he can.

CHEAP PROMOTERS KILLING GAME.
The unsophisticated promoters of the four round boxing game are the ones who start this agitation against the boxing game, and unless a stop is put to the class of bouts they pull off and the way they bunt the public the boxing game is bound to get a black eye.

Friday night at San Francisco, the Golden Gate Athletic club, composed of one man, pulled off a series of so-called "battles" that left many a man more sore than the ferry building. Two of the participants were a couple of old timers, one of whom was named Bald.

Both were so fat that neither could get out of the others way.

GRiffin HAS GOOD CARD.
Jim Griffin, through his able assistant, Gregory Mitchell, will dish up a classy card of short bouts for the fans over the bay on the night of October 27, at Dreamland rink.

Willie Ritchie and Jack Britton will box ten rounds as one of the main bouts to be offered.

These lads fought a four round go rounder in the decision being given to Ritchie. Since then Jack Costello, who is handling Britton, has been claiming that his protegee got the better of him and has been clamoring for a chance to see the Chicago lad against the local pugilist.

In a longer contest, he says that Britton cannot do himself justice in a four round bout and that ten rounds is his last but not the least.

At Sacramento in his ten round go with Johnny McCarthy, this Windy City gave merchant didn't get any world's affire, and if he fights at the way against Ritchie as he did in his other bouts here, he figures to grab the short end of the purse again.

After thinking the matter over Griffin came to the conclusion that 56 rounds of milling would bore the fans and has decided to stage only four ten-round contests. Eddie Campi vs. Jimmy Fox, Abe Labal vs. Rufe Turner, and Roy Moore vs. Lee Johnson are the other matches announced as having been consummated.

One thing the fans want to be thankful for is the fact that none of the big brush teams are in to train out this way this winter. For several seasons past we fans have had the regulars and regulars of the various big leagues in our midst doing more harm than good. Players who know they were not to make the team simply tossed the ball around and took the training stunt as a vacation in consequence the class of ball played was very poor.

HOOLIGANS PUT RINGS AROUND ANGELS IN SAME OLD WAY

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—They played because they had to play. The schedule grip was the only excuse the Tigers and Angels could give for their Saturday exhibition of scrambled line ups when Vernon won, 7 to 3.

The Tiger sluggers hit Agnew hard, timely and often, bunching 14 safeties off the baseless heaver. In the meanwhile Harry Stewart was plodding along, working time to form, allowing but six hits which was twice as many as the Angels would have made in a real ball game.

The season closes with a double-header tomorrow. The Tigers will finish in second place, one notch lower than the Angels got off at the sixth floor—from the top.

Al. Baum will be president of the league next time the work of the men and things considered they are above the average of umpires. Whether the double umpire system will prevail remains to be seen. At that it makes little or no difference. We got along nearly all year without it and the fans can still get along without it.

Cliff Blankenship one time a star in the Coast League and then a big leaguer is going to have his Missoula team train out at Emeryville in March of next year.

He has picked several classy youngsters hereabout for tryouts and will sign up Sinclair and Moore, the battery of the American Rubber Co. team of Emeryville.

AL BAUM SHOULD MAKE A CAPABLE LEAGUE PRESIDENT

Has Keen Knowledge of Game and Understands Duties Thoroughly; Lively Interest in Oaks-Beavers Series

By BERT LOWRY.

SO Judge Thomas F. Graham has laid down the burdens as president of the Pacific Coast League. To many people this came as a surprise, but the writer saw the handwriting on the wall many moons ago. Baseball is a most strenuous pastime and a man to be president of a league like the Pacific Coast League must devote all his time to the best interests of the association. For the benefit of the board of directors it might be added that the position of secretary of the league also needs a man that can devote all this time to the office also.

Judge Graham found that his position on the Superior bench at San Francisco and other matters were of such vital importance that he could not attend to them all and his decision was to retire from baseball.

In his position as president of the Coast League, Judge Graham will have to do what was right by both player and manager and in the two years that he held forth as president of the league he did it with a clear conscience and no dissension and otherwise than punishing a few refractory ball players who had been sent through the office.

As he steps down from the president's chair he goes with the knowledge that he did his duty and the fans and players as a whole wish him success in his future undertakings.

SUCCESSOR ALREADY NAMED.
With the passing of the Judge, the question naturally arose, Who will be the successor of Thomas F. Graham? On horizon of baseball's map looms the name of Allan T. Baum, a San Francisco newspaperman, and the writer wants to go on record as making the statement that Allan T. Baum is the right man for the place.

Personally, I have known Al. Baum for many years and his personality is known to me. He is a man of the great American game. Friends he has many and the press of the Pacific coast will mean for him a big thing.

In his early dealing with his fellow men Al. Baum has ever been square and firmly in the line of the gentlemanly spirit of the same kind that will naturally arise in baseball.

As for his personality Al. Baum knows baseball and that is what will count. Again he is a "crank" on clean sports and being a keen student of baseball and a real league man, he will be of course pay closer and deeper attention to the workings and success of his position than would most men.

DIRECTORS MUST SUPPORT HIM.
Now that the directorate of the Coast League has as good as decided that Al. Baum is the man for the position of the presidency of their league, they must support him. First, they must not alone make him president, but they must make him secretary and treasurer of the league. These two positions are as important as the presidency and the present holder is far from being qualified to remain as manager of the San Francisco baseball team, but whether he will still remain secretary and treasurer is another matter.

But again the writer says at the head of the San Francisco team he might stay away from him for some time, for Al. Baum has not been a success and he won't be a success and with him in the position the new president will have a hard row to hoe.

Still, let us hope that harmony will prevail and that the league will be the same and that all hands will join in a merry circle and give their full support to Al. Baum for the full term of his office.

LAST DAY IS WITH US.
This afternoon when the shadows begin to fall King Baseball will be on his way to oblivion for a few months, for it is the closing day of the Coast League and the Coast League runs the longest of any in the land.

A short review shows that the 1911 season has been a most prosperous one for several of the teams. Oakland, Portland and Vernon have made barrels of money, simply because they have had winning teams in the field. San Francisco, too, may have made money with a clever manager at the helm, but they didn't have one, so many stray quarters stayed away from them and the fact is, Sacramento had a poor manager, while Los Angeles was a hopeless case from the day of the game with the Seals. At that though, it was good baseball for the fans and they will be among those present again next season for the game that is still firmly fixed within the heart.

After the close of the season today the Beavers and Oaks will even break in all the city of Oakland to rest up until next Thursday upon which day they will battle for what might be called a real championship series.

Since the beginning of the season these two teams have met 42 times and each has won 21 games, an even break in all the season's playing. Therefore, when they hook up in the series of five games commencing Thursday at Freeman park, the fans will have a chance when they are over of knowing which is really the best.

Both clubs will present their full line-up in the series, the only absent player being Bill Steen, who will remain on the bench at the bedside of his sick wife.

DIAMOND DUST.
Back east the rain continues to fall and the big world's series are at a standstill with the Athletics two won and one lost. Johnny McGraw, big gun of the Giants, is still hopeful that he can overcome this lead and hopes that the two teams can get into action tomorrow so that the series can be closed up this week.

On November 12, the first meeting of the National Association of minor leagues will take place at San Antonio, Texas. If J. Cal. Biring and the rest of the fighters in minor league circles get after the big moguls of the game as they say they will, then there should be something stirring in baseball.

Charley Graham of Sacramento has blossomed out as a full fledged baseball magnate and is now sole owner of the Senatorial outfit. John I. Taylor found that it was easier to have Brockton, Mass., as his farming club than Sacramento, so he sold out.

All signs point to Sacramento still being in the league next year, so fans can look forward to hope that Charley will be a better manager than the last one.

INCIDENTS OF THE FAIRMOUNT RACES

Two Mechanics Are Thrown From Cars and Picked Up Uninjured.

It is unusual, to say the least, for two men to be thrown from racing cars going at high speed and to get up uninjured, but that is exactly what happened in the 200-mile Fairmount Park contest last Monday. Ralph Mulford, driving the Loxior car that was given second place through the disqualification of a competitor, was making fast time when his mechanic disappeared. Mulford stopped as quickly as he could and was surprised to see his associate running toward him. The mechanic jumped into his seat and they were off with a loss of time or less than half a minute. Wishart, driving the 300 Mercedes, had a similar experience. His mechanic was climbing into his seat after a momentary stop, when Wishart started, throwing the man, but not injuring him in the least.

Everyone who made a circuit of the Fairmount course was surprised at its hilly nature. Usually races are driven over level roads, but at Fairmount there are several steep hills and very sharp turns. Notwithstanding this fact, all the cars took the hills at forty miles an hour or faster.

More than half the interest of the average spectator of an automobile race lies in watching the rapid work of the drivers when stopped at the pit for gasoline, oil or tire changes. The pits at the Fairmount course were away down the road from the grand stand, so that none of the quick action stunts could be seen by the race goers. This was a keen disappointment to many visitors.

The performance of the pneumatic tires at the Quaker City race was remarkable. The winning Benz changed only two tires, while the driver, Erwin Bergdoll, averaged over 61 miles an hour for the entire distance of 202 miles. Bergdoll used Michelin tires, which are considered very dependable. It is a notable fact that all the cars to finish were Michelin equipped.

The Philadelphia race on October 9 was remarkable in many ways. Two Philadelphia millionaires and a third very wealthy young man were among the starters. Erwin Bergdoll, the winner, is only 21 years old. He is one of the Quaker City's richest young men. Freddy Bate is also in the very wealthy class. Although he made only three laps, he was driving very fast when an unfortunate accident put him out of the race.

Over 2000 Philadelphia policemen patrolled the course during the Fairmount races. They are a fine body of men and they did their work well. Although there were at least 300,000 people present and thousands of cars, not a single person was even slightly injured from any cause whatever.

Service Stations Great Assistance

"Every year the automobile business is like the circus—bigger and better than ever before," said F. E. Moskovics, sales manager of the Regal Electric Company, and one of the pioneer automobile men of the country. Of course, everyone who talks for publication is always optimistic about the condition of the industry, but one has only to consider the tremendous progress of the business to realize that the motor car industry has been bigger and better and finer with each year.

"Then again every man in the trade talks about the 'settling down' process. All agree in their public statements that the automobile business while losing none of its glamour and fascination has lost the incompetents and the fly-by-night institutions to a great extent.

"Personally I think that the greatest tangible evidence that business conditions have improved as far as the buying public is concerned is found in the establishment of service departments. Some of the better institutions have had service departments for several years. However, they have been afraid to make public announcements of this feature of their business on account of the general tendency to claim perfection for all cars.

The Remy Company was among the very first—I really believe it was the first in the nation—to publicly announce service stations and attention to users of equipment after it was sold and installed. There is no use in anyone deceiving themselves and we know that every mechanical device made needs some kind of intelligent care and adjustment—often if nothing else."

PACIFIC HIGHWAY SHOWING GROWTH

Project Conceived a Year Ago for Connecting Roads Is Meeting With Favor.

Things grow rapidly out West. One cannot take a flying trip back East without finding, on his return, that the nephew he left as a round-eyed boy is now in knickerbockers and asking questions; that the nursery alpine he planted in front of the door just before his departure are now interfering with the telephone wires and the paving.

One of the best examples of phenomenal growth on the Coast is the Pacific Highway. Little more than a year ago this project was conceived as a road to connect Oregon, Washington and California. It was taken up with enthusiasm by the general public, and newspapers in every community ran columns after columns about it. Before long its planners had succeeded in marking highway through Washington. Now it has gone through Oregon and is pausing for a moment on the California line.

At the completion of work in the Evergreen State, the Pacific Highway Association nicknamed their road "The Road of Three Nations." They decided to invade Mexico and British Columbia.

British Columbia was more than willing. The provincial government appropriated large sums for construction, and announced its intention of making Pacific Highway passable clear through to the Alaska border. The recent success of P. E. Sands in marking the trail from Ashcroft to Hazelton assured the early completion of this work. Now that the Hazelton trophy is in the hands of its winner, motorists' eyes are turned toward a similar medal, to go to the first car which reaches Mexico City from San Diego. It is not likely that the golden wheel will rest long unclaimed.

About a month ago the officers of the association began to discuss Mexico with more interest. Towns were marked on maps; possible routes were laid out in pencil; tours were scheduled for next summer. Such runs will be made under much more favorable conditions than prevailed last summer, since a strong man is now in power in the turbulent republic.

Today, with interest stronger than ever with the attention of the whole nation centered on Pacific Highway as one of a great chain of national roads, its originators are contemplating no less plan than the extension of Pacific Highway to the Straits of Magellan. A route has not yet been definitely selected.

IS PLEASED WITH UNDERSLUNG CAR

Hartford Makes Himself Exclusive Agent for This Type of Car.

So pleased with the underslung construction is B. A. Foster, a leading automobile dealer of Hartford, Conn., that he has made himself an exclusive "Underslung" agent. Mr. Foster states that he is a firm believer in the future of the underslung frame and is greatly pleased with the efforts of such companies as the Regal Motor Car Company of Detroit to place a moderate priced underslung touring car before the American and foreign buyer.

"The moderate priced underslung is here to stay," asserts Mr. Foster. "At first I was skeptical of the popular priced car with an underslung frame, but I have since tested the new line to my complete satisfaction. It may be a new venture, but from now on I shall maintain an 'underslung' agency."

Chalmers Owner Tells of Record

This sounds almost too good to be true, but Charles W. Bixby, who has just returned to San Francisco from the East, says he is sure of his record. In any case, said Calvin C. Ebb, of the Pioneer Automobile Company, it is well to let him tell his own story without comment. "Thinking," said Bixby, "that you might be interested in the record made by my Chalmers '36' touring car on a run from Wilkes-Barre to Glen Summit Springs and back, on September 8, I will give the result: Distance as recorded on speedometer, 26.9 miles; gasoline used, slightly under one gallon; elevation of Glen Summit Springs above Wilkes-Barre, 1100 feet. I had no one with me going up and one passenger with me coming down. The measurements of gasoline used were made very carefully and the engine was run freely for fully 15 minutes before starting, and during two stops on the way. I made no attempt to make fast time, and, in fact, went up the mountain quite slowly, as the road is narrow and I could not very well pass another car which was ahead of me. About a quarter of a mile was run on low gear, about 3 miles on second and the balance on high. Going down I ran about 3 miles on compression on second gear, about 3 miles on second and the balance on high. This car has been run nearly 8000 miles."

Here Is A Formal Introduction To A Mighty Good Automobile

$1400

Regal "35" Five-Passenger "Underslung" Touring Car

"SALESMANSHIP ON PAPER"—that's what most people call advertising. But in this advertisement we do not expect to sell you off hand a Regal "35" Underslung Touring Car, but we do believe that you will, after reading about this automobile, desire to see it and satisfy yourself that our publicity is for your best interests, and we presume, of course, you are a possible purchaser.

YOU, VERY NATURALLY desire to buy the best car you possibly can for a certain expenditure of money, and as we have been concentrating engineering and constructional experience in building good cars for a number of years, we meet together upon common ground—you as the buyer—we as the seller. Our car and your need of a car. It's a simple business equation, isn't it?

BUT WHY SHOULD YOU BUY A REGAL "Underslung" Touring Car? There are too many salient reasons to enumerate here, but apart from the low price behind and in each and every one of these reasons is the "Underslung" Construction. We have been educating the public for some time on its overwhelming advantages, so we will only give you a brief argument.

UNDERSLUNG CONSTRUCTION is new only as applied to automobiles. It has been used for years on all weighty, fast moving vehicles, such as railroad and trolley cars. The center of gravity is considerably lower by reason of the weight of the car being slung below the axles instead of balanced upon springs above them.

WHAT ARE THE ADVANTAGES?—SAFETY—less tendency to skid, turning turtle almost an impossibility. Comfort—no weaving or side swaying when going around corners. All surface shocks are absorbed by springs—a delightful sensation of "skimming" the road. Economy—level motor suspension and straight line shaft drive to rear axle, conserving power as in no other car—no side lash on springs or tires. Accessibility—immediate to every working part. Lubrication—perfect, owing to level motor suspension. Clearance—a full 10 inches (as much as the ordinary type). Beauty—the most distinguished car in any company of cars.

THE SUPERIORITY of the Underslung Construction is—that the most desirable qualities in any automobile are intensely emphasized in this Regal Car. Safety—Comfort—Economy—Accessibility—Beauty. The ordinary type of car cannot compete with an Underslung in these necessary elements—therefore, there are well founded reasons for the tremendous interest experts and buyers are taking in this—the one advanced model of the year.

WE HAVE DELIVERED over a thousand of these cars already, and everywhere purchasers are enthusiastic about them. Enduring—powerful—silent—speedy—at a price that is undoubtedly a challenge in value and comparison. The Regal "35" Five-Passenger "Underslung" Touring Car is a car any man should be proud to own. It will be a down-to-the-minute car in 1912 and 1913, because the "Underslung" principle is mechanically and logically the best construction for motor cars.

SERVICE—Behind the Regal Car is the Regal Service. A chain of Regal Service Warehouses, extending from coast to coast and placed at strategic points, is the Regal method of taking immediate and consistent care of buyers and owners of Regal cars. Any Regal dealer, wherever situated, can supply any model, any part at short notice, through the nearest Regal Warehouse. So, every Regal Car is under direct factory supervision. The thousands of Regal owners are each and every one members of a great organization which exists for the specific purpose of rendering them not only efficient but instant service.

YOU HAVE KINDLY GIVEN US a few moments of your time to read this advertisement—may we further ask you to call on our nearest Regal representative. He will show you the car, take you riding in it, introduce you to owners who will back up all the good things said about this mighty good automobile. If there isn't a Regal dealer near you, write us at the factory.

The Dealers who handle Regal cars are especially chosen for a high grade standard of service. They are representative of all that tends to upbuild a permanent and highly profitable business upon the foundation of service. Their interest in customers does not end with the sale of a car but begins with the purchase of a car. We are always looking for the "Regal Standard" among dealers. Wire or write.

DU PONT HIGHWAY EMBODIES IDEAS

Features Planned Which Will Make it a Monument of Note to Donor.

In deciding to give Delaware a 110 mile trunk line highway, General T. Coleman du Pont recognizes that such a road would be of some benefit to every inhabitant of the State. A hospital, college, and manual training school were considered but rejected in favor of the road, and so General du Pont proposed to present to his home State the most finished road ever constructed in the world, with only one proviso, and that decidedly essential, for it related to the guarantee of State maintenance forever.

"I want to build a road that will be a lasting one, and I am gradually collecting all engineering data obtainable in addition to engaging road engineers of experience, who understand thoroughly the conditions to be met with in this day of multiplied and varied traffic. Of course, this road will show to the people of Delaware the difference between a two horse load over a bad road and a one horse load over a good road. We have had inferior roads for a long enough period. I sincerely hope the people of Delaware will see the advantage when the road becomes an actuality.

"Every 20 miles I have in mind the establishment of agricultural experimental stations for the benefit of the farmer and development of the State, in charge of graduates from the agricultural colleges in the country. They will show the farmers of Delaware, and those of any other state, how two blades of grass will grow where they had grown one before. Of course, there will be other representative adjuncts for farm life, live stock of the best breeds, for it is my belief that only healthy and the best cattle should serve the needs of the human race.

"As to the road itself, my ideas involve a combination which would ultimately provide for both motor-driven vehicles and horse-drawn carriages and wagons. A 40-foot road should take care of the motor vehicles, and also permit of reasonable speed for ordinary vehicle traffic. A 30-foot pathway will give ample space for horse-drawn vehicles. I believe the value of this road when finished will be to show the people of the United States by a practical example, how any section can build a road that will pay for its maintenance, will ultimately pay for itself, and pay those who contributed the land a handsome dividend on the original ground or investment. County or State credit might be needed temporarily, but in a growing section for only a very short time."

Trees will line the roadways, arranged in such manner as to afford the greatest protection, for General du Pont considers that much of the success of up-keeping European roads is due to the care of the trees along the roadside. This road will also have stations for the landing of airplanes, after the latest known methods adopted by the Belgians. General du Pont believes that the day of federal aid is comparatively near at hand. Furthermore, it is his idea that other prominent men who desire to benefit their States and communities in a lasting manner, will follow his example in supplying highways rather than contributing libraries or monuments, which, while good enough in their way, fall far short of the general value of a first class road.

New Waverley

Catalogue Fine

The Waverley 1912 catalogue embodies a new idea in catalogue building. The earliest product of the Waverley factory was named after the Waverley novels. In casting about for a suitable scheme of decoration for this year the Waverley advertising manager selected incidents and characters from the novels themselves and scenes associated with Abbotsford, the home of Sir Walter Scott, as the setting of his narrative.

Thus the outside cover displays in green and gold figures in medieval armor taken from the entrance hall at Abbotsford. The inner cover shows Scott's coat of arms under a three-color picture of the Waverley 1912 Limousine in the garden at Abbotsford. Across the tops of all the inside pages runs a frieze in three colors and gold, representing the tournament in "Ivanhoe." The portrait of Sir Walter backs up the title page and in the wide margins on either side of the printed matter appear panel portraits of different Waverley characters. The two center pages of the catalogue are devoted to a large four-color half tone of a Waverley car on the Abbotsford estate.

The artist employed to illustrate the catalogue was Frederick Richardson, well-known book illustrator of Chicago. His work shows evidence of considerable study and research in the selection of armor and costumes as well as of skillful handling of line and color.

IF YOU WOULD WIN FAIR SEX BE CONCEITED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Dr. Arthur Holmes, professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, in lecturing to the students here, endeavored to tell them how to make a hit with the women. He believes that conceit, and lots of it, is three-quarters of the love battle.

"Now, young man," said the learned professor, "if you wish to be popular with the young ladies, the very first thing you must do is to learn to be conceited. Just think yourself there is not one in the world like you, and make the young woman know that you think so. Then they will begin to think the same way you do."

NEW WINTON HAS ARRIVED HERE

Contains Many New Improvements; Meets With Favor Among Buyers.

The first of the new Winton cars which was received here during the last week is attracting no end of attention among the buyers of the highest grade cars.

Since its advent locally about the only time it has been on the salesroom floor of Osen and Hunter Auto Co., the local distributors has been at night. Throughout the day demonstrations are in order in various parts of the city, Berkeley and Alameda.

For the coming season the Winton has been refined, new details being added which serve not only to beautify but also to increase the comfort from this latest model.

As an illustration of a detail heretofore overlooked by nearly every maker we cite the doing away with the side all lamps. In their stead, electric lights of the most artistic design have been fitted on either side of the dash board. At night they throw a splendid light, one of which is much stronger than that of the ordinary side lamp.

These electric globes are so made that the rear end may be opened. When this is done a bright light is reflected on the dash board.

The system of ventilation on the new Wintons is of an improved nature, and really does perform the work for which it is designed.

CHANGE OF AGENCY HAS BEEN MADE

New Concern Will Handle the Maxwell Cars; A. C. Hull Made Manager.

The Maxwell Sales Agency, under the management of A. C. Hull, former sales manager of the Maxwell Motor Co., has established temporary quarters at the corner of Twelfth and Madison streets. Both the Maxwell and the Columbia cars are to be handled and a full line of accessories used on Maxwell cars will be carried in stock, an arrangement which is bound to meet with favor among the numerous present owners of these cars.

This new concern is to be under the direct management of Fred J. Linz, Pacific Coast Manager of the United Motors San Francisco Co.

A department will be organized for the proper care of Maxwell and Columbia owners. A full line of the accessories used on Maxwell cars will be carried in stock, an arrangement which is bound to meet with favor among the numerous present owners of these cars.

LIVE 'DUMMIES' WANTED FOR SHOW WINDOWS

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 21.—The delegates from Cincinnati who attended the convention in Chicago of the National Association of Window Trimmers, have inaugurated a plan, which if perfected, will soon supplant the old-fashioned "dummies" wearing garments with human models.

The move was favored at the convention for two reasons. In the first place, the "wearability" and style of garments are shown to poorer advantage on the dummy figure than on the human form. Then again a pretty woman would attract attention to the whole window display. If the plan is adopted generally a new occupation—that of window model—will have been created.

WINNERS MADE KNOWN IN TOUR

American, Warren and Flanders Are Awarded Trophies On Final Results.

RESULTS OF THE LOS ANGELES SAN FRANCISCO ENDURANCE RUN.

1.....	American "50".....	87 Points
2.....	Warren.....	87 Points
3.....	Flanders Runabout.....	87 Points
4.....	American "50".....	87 Points
5.....	S. G. V.....	115 Points
6.....	Cartercar.....	2030 Points
7.....	Flanders.....	2048 Points

AWARDS—First prize, Potter Hotel Trophy, to the American "50"; Second prize, Stockton Hotel Trophy, to the Warren, driven by Hobson; Third prize, Hobson Trophy, to the Flanders Runabout. For the best score by firms entering more than one car, the American won the Team Trophy.

The results of the Los Angeles Endurance Run were made known by the Technical Committee yesterday. Their opinions were rendered after a most critical inspection of the various cars.

While the number of points charged against some of the contestants totals a big average against them, still the cars were found to be in good shape at the close of the tour.

One of the Americans was given first place with the Warren "30" second and the Flanders Runabout third.

During the progress of the tour these three cars performed consistently and at the finish of the run on Wednesday it was a toss-up as to which of the three would be declared the winner.

The performance of the American was in keeping with its past splendid records made in the state during the last few months.

The real dark horse of the tour was the Warren, entered by Columbus Hobson, the Fresno representative. Little was known of its chances of it winning among the majority interested in the tour. However, among the automobile men there was a feeling of confidence that the car would come home a winner unless it met with misfortune.

Once again the Flanders cars proved their reliability in contests of the nature of the one just ended, both cars finishing with creditable performances as their allotment.

Both the S. G. V. and Cartercar, while not among the winners, finished the tour in good shape and had it not been for ill luck they might have had much better scores.

MAN BITES OFF HEAD OF SNAKE IN HIS TOBACCO

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Oct. 21.—A local tobacco chewer had an experience today that caused him to give up the weed. As he bit into a twist of a popular brand of tobacco he struck a bony like substance, which he removed from his mouth to find that he had bitten off the head of a snake. The twist of tobacco was unrolled and the entire snake was found wrapped up in the tobacco.

The chewer has threatened to bring suit against the manufacturer. It is believed the person who rolled the snake in the twist did it for a joke.

"DEAD" MAN COMES TO ON WAY TO UNDERTAKER'S

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—While being carried into an undertaking establishment, David Basley, 32 years old, of La Grange, Ill., thought to be dead, regained consciousness and shouted, "Take me out of here; I'm not going to die yet!"

He was taken to a hospital for treatment and may recover from injuries received when he was struck on the head with a rifle while quarreling with Rose Holt over a woman.

PIONEER AUTO CO. NEW R. C. H. AGENTS

Secure Local Territory On the Popular Priced Car; Place Big Initial Order.

The Pioneer Automobile Company has just closed with the Hupp corporation of Detroit, Mich., for 500 of their much-talked-about cars, 300 of which will be runabouts and 200 touring cars.

This is the new line of cars that created such a sensation when announced in the trade papers a few weeks ago, and no automobile agency in the history of the country has been so sought after as was this agency when the announcement was made. By virtue of Mr. Brinegar's friendship of long standing with Mr. Hupp and others of the new corporation, he was able to secure this line for his company.

The remarkable feature of the "R. C. H." car is its design and the material used. The runabout, which is a 4-passenger car, equipped with top and glass front, will sell for $750 f. o. b. factory. The motor is of the long stroke type, having a stroke of five inches, giving the car 22 horsepower. When you consider that the car will weigh only 1600 pounds, it is easy to understand why it has been given the reputation it has in the East. The machine is equipped with Bosch magneto, has three speeds, selective type and two internal and two external brakes.

The touring car will have 110-inch wheel base, and is of the torpedo type. It has the same motor, and the same general construction and the same equipment as the runabout, and will sell for $850 f. o. b. factory.

The Hupp corporation will also build a 3-passenger coupe with five electric lights and the price will be $1050 f. o. b. factory.

When the specifications of the R. C. H. are considered, this is a most remarkable car at the price. This is the verdict all over the country, and is the reason why the R. C. H. agency was so sought after.

R. H. Morris of the Pioneer Automobile Company, who is now in Detroit looking after shipping interests of his company, wired yesterday that a carload of the R. C. H. runabouts, including the demonstrator, will be shipped on November 10, and the Pioneer Company is to receive fifty of these cars during the month of December. Therefore early deliveries will be made on this car.

The Pioneer Company has had 52 applications from sub-dealers throughout the state for the agency of this car, but will not make any definite arrangements until November 1.

CALIFORNIA LEADS AT BIG OMAHA LAND SHOW

Resources and Products of the Golden State Are Best Features of Fair.

ALAMEDA COUNTY WELL REPRESENTED

Exhibit So Interesting That Crowds Cannot Stay Away From Booths.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 21.—California is very much in evidence at the Omaha Land Show this week and next, and its exhibits are attracting attention from the large crowds of visitors on account of their variety as well as their magnificence. Other states are here with their best—Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, Utah, and Colorado—but the Golden State has so many interesting things to show that the crowds cannot stay away from the splendid California booths.

Some of Luther Burbank's freaks are displayed in the Alameda county exhibit, which is in charge of Wilbur W. Burbank. The freaks include red-walnut corn, plums as large as pears, potatoes weighing four pounds, plums, a cross between a plum and an apricot; thornless cacti, pitless plums, coreless apples and flowers of a terracotta color, and blended from the gold of opium and the jack-in-the-box, and also seventy-eight varieties of nuts.

OTHER ATTRACTIVE DISPLAYS.

Fresno county has piled its exhibits in splendid profusion at the foot of the scenic stairway, where the crowds stop each day to see the wonders. Everything raised in the famous county is there. The largest exhibition consist of many boxes of raisins. Shavings of wheat, alfalfa and great stacks of grain and vegetables are arranged about the booth, a fitting frame for the splendid raisin exhibit. J. M. Swift, who is in charge of the booth, tells his visitors that Fresno county has the best irrigation and cheapest water for irrigation purposes of any community in the West, and that large sections of the county are also producing abundantly without irrigation. He also tells of the county's magnificent system of oil roads.

The Tulare county exhibit, near the middle of the hall, is housed in two booths, built upon a raised platform, artificially trimmed and decorated with the California poppy. Along the outside the booths are frescoed with large photographs of California scenery, orchards and ranch scenes, while inside, in jars and in their original state, are the products of this wonderful land. It is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Mitot of Visalia, and is the exhibit of the Tulare county board of trade. Unexcelled Indian corn, Egyptian corn, potatoes that yield 300 bushels per acre, grown without irrigation; pumpkins and squashes, the largest of which weighs 250 pounds and as sweet as sugar; alfalfa and native grasses in profusion, peaches that weigh sixteen ounces each, as delicately colored as a maiden's cheek and as sweet as honey, and pears, prunes, apples, grapes and raisins are some of the products shown.

VISITORS ARE TREATED.

Every visitor has to sample the pure orange juice served daintily from cut glass punch bowls in the Los Angeles and San Diego section. This exhibit, magnificently displayed at the head of the large hall, contains a variety of products which suggest an empire instead of a county.

In addition to the county and public displays, there are railroad and private booths, including products of Tehama county shown by the Trowbridge-Bolster Company, and an exhibit of the Stanislaus county, in the Stanislaus county booth by the Payne Investment Company of Omaha.

Richmond to Have $15,000 Playhouse Devoted to Best Vaudeville Features.

RICHMOND, Oct. 21.—Excavation for the new theater at the corner of Fifth street and Macdonald avenue is progressing rapidly and details of the new structure are expected in a few days. The auditorium will be built by J. Connelly of San Francisco, who recently purchased the site for $3500, and who it is understood, will erect thereon a building to cost not less than $15,000. Plans have not been fully perfected as to the design of the building beyond the fact that it will be fireproof, with a seating capacity of about 1200. It will probably be similar in design to the Savoy in San Francisco, with a stage 40 feet wide and 25 feet deep. $220 GIVEN AS A BRIBE TO SLAY Insane Woman Gets Tired of Waiting for Man to Take Her Life.

FRESNO, Oct. 21.—It was learned today that Mrs. Anna Fenlud, who is at the Burnett sanitarium suffering from injuries caused by jumping out of window on a moving Santa Fe train near Hanford while demented, had given a man passenger $220 if he would kill her. It is said that the woman became tired of waiting for the man to carry out his act and jumped through the window. The man gave Mrs. Fenlud a receipt for her money. He later turned the money over to the conductor. Mrs. Fenlud had not regained consciousness at a late hour tonight and her condition is still considered critical. It will probably be necessary to operate to remove parts of the bone from her brain. John Fenlud, a brother-in-law, arrived in Fresno yesterday from San Francisco and left later accompanied by Mrs. Fenlud's little son.

R. C. H. ROADSTER

The WARREN Scores

AN UNDISPUTED VICTORY

in the San Francisco-Los Angeles 1000-Mile Endurance Run

Built in Three Different Sizes

A Wide Range of Body Styles

It was beaten only by a car costing THREE TIMES AS MUCH in the most severe endurance contest ever held in this country. It defeated three other higher-priced cars in a most decisive manner.

This latest victory CONCLUSIVELY PROVES THAT WARREN CARS CHALLENGE THE WORLD FOR VALUE IN CONSTRUCTION, WORKMANSHIP AND POWER.

The Warren Already Holds Two Official American Records—One World's Record.

Two official straight-away records for five and ten miles, respectively—in the 161 to 230-piston displacement class—prove that the Warren has speed and can make a quick getaway. A world's record was made at Los Angeles, April 9th, when a regular Warren stock car covered 1167 miles in 24 hours straight running, averaging over 48 1/2 miles per hour; going through the entire grind WITHOUT A MOTOR ADJUSTMENT OR TIRE CHANGE. This demonstrates conclusively that the Warren has remarkable power, speed, and endurance.

40,000-Mile Endurance Test

Added to these achievements is the sensational trip of the Warren Wolverine stock Touring Car which crossed and re-crossed the continent, doing over 40,000 miles and wearing out three sets of drivers and correspondents. Could any evidence as to quality of materials and construction be more decisive?

Quality is built into every Warren, and every owner quickly realizes that Warren quality is a tangible asset that makes Warren cars run faster, quieter, makes them ride easier, last longer, and look better than other cars of similar price. We urge comparison of materials, workmanship, finish and performance.

Northern California Distributors.

MATHESON SALES CO.

176 12th Street, Oakland.

Corner Van Ness Avenue and Jackson Street, San Francisco

The R. C. H. car is the latest creation of the Hupp Corporation of Detroit, Michigan. Detroit, the home of many of the best automobiles made in the world, and the city from which most motoring surprises emanate, has, during the past, announced but very few new cars that have equaled the sensation created by the announcement of this high-class car, designed by Mr. R. C. Hupp.

It is reasonable to assume that with a reputation such as the Hupp Corporation enjoys, the new R. C. H. must necessarily be right. Judging from the manner in which this new car has been received by the trade in general all over the United States, and the great scramble of dealers throughout the country for the R. C. H. agency, there is no doubt in the minds of even the most skeptical that this car will prove up to its manufacturer's expectations.

The body of the R. C. H. is made of metal, and is of the fore-door or closed type. The fenders, which do not touch the frame, are long and sweeping, and the running boards are stamped steel with a raised or pyramid surface, insuring a firm footing. The seat is broad and comfortable, and two persons will find plenty of room. The dash slopes back into a neat-appearing pilot, which affords good protection for winter or cool weather driving. If, on the other hand, the weather is warm, the body compartment can be ventilated by means of two metal ventilators, the aperture in the dash being screened.

There are two comfortable rumble seats. A single-piece wind shield is included in the equipment, and so is a top. Stretching from one lamp bracket to the other is a steel bar, which braces the fenders, these eye-clamped to this cross-rod. The front gas lights are fitted with an oil type of bracket, which insures a firm anchorage.

The R. C. H. five-passenger touring car which will sell for $850 will be equipped with the same motor as the roadster, but will have a five-passenger torpedo body, and the wheel base of the car will be increased to 110 inches. The size of the tires will also be increased to provide for the additional weight of the touring body. Deliveries on this touring car will be procurable during the latter part of the month of December.

R. C. H. TOURING CAR

We will have a demonstrating or sample car on hand at a very early date and will commence making deliveries during the early part of next month. While this is our initial announcement, and is made at this time because we will very soon be in a position to exhibit one of these cars, we have already booked a number of orders from photographs and description of the car. We will positively deliver all cars in exact rotation in which orders are placed. Every order will, of course, be dated, and will later be filled in accordance with the date thereon. We have no doubt that we can deliver every car that will be available to us right here in the City of San Francisco alone, but we assure everybody that there will be no preference shown, regardless of locality from which orders are received. One and all ordering R. C. H. cars will share alike.

OSLER RIGHT; YOUTH SUCCEEDS AGE

Gray Hair Is First Sign of Age, Harmless Remedy Restores to Natural Color.

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. SALAD MAKING IS ART, AVERS SENN

Master of Subject Gives Expert Advice On Its Necessary Ingredients.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.) LONDON, Oct. 21.—Introduced to the Royal Horticultural Society at Vincent square, Westminster, as a "master of his subject," Hermann Senn gave expert advice on "salads and salad-making." "All salad plants must be thoroughly washed, but not soaked. Then they must be drained and torn, not cut into shreds. Above all, never mix the materials with a steel knife. When the shredding is accomplished put the whole into a salad basket, or into a cloth, and swing thoroughly to remove the superfluous moisture. Dressing should be done as near as possible to the time when the salad is required for the table. "Two or three times as much oil as vinegar should be employed, and the vinegar should be sour wine. The salt should be mixed with the vinegar, in which it dissolves, and then the vinegar should be added to the oil. If good oil be beyond the means of the salad-maker, some fat bacon cut into very thin shreds and fried till it is just browned will provide the necessary flavor. Elder is frequently used to give acidity. "A good way to flavor with garlic is to place a piece of toasted bread in the salad bowl; cut a piece of garlic and rub the toast with it. That is all. You then place the salad on top of the bread and it acquires just the delicate soupçon of garlic which is desired."

FAMOUS AUTHOR OF 'VIRGINIAN' VERY MUCH ALIVE

OWEN WISTER.

RIGBY, Idaho, Oct. 21.—Contrary to the recent rumor that Owen Wister, author of "The Virginian," was near death at his ranch in Jackson's Hole, Wyoming, which caused thousands of his admirers all over the country deep concern, the author is reported to be in good health, having recently completed a short hunting trip. He has left for New York and before leaving said that the rumors of his ill-health were unfounded. Wister, who is a native of Philadelphia, is 45 years old and is a graduate of Harvard university. He was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia in 1899.

FRANCE FACES A MAMMOTH BUDGET

Expenditure for Fiscal Year to Reach Almost One Billion Dollars.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—M. Klotz, Minister of Finance, has just submitted his project for next year's budget to the Chamber's committee. He lays great stress on the manner in which expenditure has progressively increased since the beginning of this century. Thus, while the budget of 1901 amounted to 2,554,000,000 francs, that of 1912 will reach the stupendous figure of 4,500,000,000 francs (almost $1,000,000,000), the augmentation of expenditure in eleven years amounting to 1,946,000,000 francs. Much of the responsibility for this state of things is attributed to the reforms which have been put into execution. M. Klotz speaks quite tenderly of the long suffering taxpayer and of the sacrifices to which he has been subjected, and says that he will spare him as much as any man can; but among other things, taxes are being imposed on gas and electricity, and the prospect is not brilliant. It may be added, however, that the income tax is not yet a stern reality, and may perhaps never be.

CRASH OF GLASS REVEALS BURGLAR

Intended Victim Pursues the Intruder to Window, Where Escape Is Made.

The crash of breaking glass awakened H. S. Geney, 321 East Sixteenth street early yesterday morning, to discover that a burglar was in the room and was busily engaged in looting the place. In moving about the bedroom the burglar had accidentally overbalanced a stand mirror on the bureau, knocking it to the floor with a loud crash as the glass was shattered into fragments. Geney leaped from his bed and pursued the thief into the front of the house, where the man escaped by throwing himself through an open window, by means of which he had gained access to the house. Geney was in his night clothes and unarmed, and he did not pursue the thief. The police were notified immediately and a search was made, but without avail. The burglar had gathered some jewelry in a pile on the bureau, but left it behind when he escaped. Nothing was taken. Jose Dias of 321 East Fourteenth street reported to the police yesterday that a burglar had entered his store during the night and had stolen nine pairs of shoes valued at $9.

MANUSCRIPT OF THIRD CENTURY IS DISCOVERED

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—Professor Harnack, the famous church historian of Berlin University, has announced the discovery of an old manuscript of much interest to students of the early history of Christianity. Dr. Dioboniotis, a Greek professor of the University of Athens, found an old document of the tenth century in the Meteora monastery a short time ago. He sent it to Professor Harnack, who decided that it was written by Origen, one of the earliest fathers. The manuscript itself dates from the third century, and consists of a commentary on the book of Revelation up to chapter xiv.

FAMOUS LONDON HOTEL IS CLOSED

Longs in New Bond Street Gained Fame Many Years Ago.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Long's hotel, 16, New Bond street, one of the most famous establishments of its kind in London, which has been in existence for over a century and a half, has closed its doors. On the front entrance is written a notice asking visitors to "Ring bell at side," but no other intimation that the hotel's career has come to an end. The literary associations of Long's are very interesting. Here Byron and Sir Walter Scott met for the last time in 1815. "He dined or lunched with me," wrote Scott, "at Long's hotel in Bond street. I never saw him so full of gaiety and good humor, to which the presence of Mr. Mathews, the comedian, added not a little. Poor Terry was also present."

"While there can be no doubt that at one time Long's hotel was a great gambling and betting place during the regency," says a correspondent of the Times, "it was noted for refinement and family comfort in contrast to Stevens' at No. 13 New Bond street, which had an entrance in Clifford street, opposite Long's. Stevens' during the regency was the headquarters for officers of the army and men about town, and Captain Gronow tells us that if a stranger wanted to dine there he would be stared at by the servants and very solemnly assured that there was no table vacant.

"In later years Stevens' became scarcely more than an annex to Long's hotel, glad to receive its numerous visitors. A few years ago Stevens' hotel, where during the seven or eight years before his marriage Byron occasionally lived, ceased to exist.

'FRIENDS' BET FOR HIM; LOSES $2000

Wm. Hall Rowland Has Unpleasant Experiment at British Track.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—There was much amusement at Scotland Yard this week over the experience of William Hall Rowland, a wealthy Philadelphia coal operator, with a gang of crooks who separated him from nearly $2000 at a racetrack near Hull. He let the gang play his money, not bothering himself to record the bets, and was informed at the end of the race that he must pay them the amount of their losses. He did not want to have anybody arrested but his wife escorted him to the police station, where he was informed of his robbery. The judge hearing the cases said: "You took your wife with you to the racetrack. I hope she takes better care of you in the future."

Covent Garden is depending much on the support of the Anglo-American colony nowadays and is anxiously awaiting the end of the country house parties. On the opening night this week the Duchess of Manchester, who is going out much more these days, occupied a box with her husband. Others in the audience were Mrs. Cecil Bingham, Mrs. Walter Burns and Lady Curzon.

This morning Dawson obtained 15 indictments against business buildings where the occupants hold government liquor licenses. NEW PASTOR FOR ST. CLEMENT'S

Rev. F. A. Martyr of Oakland Goes to the Claremont District to Fill Vacancy.

BERKELEY, Oct. 21.—Vestrymen of St. Mark's Episcopal parish announced this afternoon the resignation of Rev. F. G. Williams as pastor of St. Clement's chapel in the Claremont district and the election by the vestry of Rev. F. A. Martyr of Holy Innocents chapel, Oakland, to fill the vacancy.

Rev. Williams has resigned to go to Honolulu on account of his health. He has occupied local pulpits for more than two years. Dr. Williams has accepted a call to St. Clement's church in Honolulu. Dr. Martyr has accepted the call extended him by the vestry and will take up his new duties soon. He is a graduate of a divinity school at Fairbault, Minn., and served as a missionary in that state for two years. He has been at the Holy Innocents church on Shattuck avenue for about two years.

Oakland's Growth and Progress Impressive in Eyes of Visiting Strangers

PROSPERITY IS ASSURED TO THIS CITY

Millions of Dollars Now Being Spent to Improve Local Transportation Lines.

Expansion of the Wholesale and Warehouse Quarter; Other Progress.

Oakland is forging ahead more rapidly now than ever. Its continued progress is positively assured. No human agent can now arrest it. It has long since emerged from the domain of doubt. In all directions the evidences of growth and prosperity are manifest. Strangers visiting Oakland are amazed at the structural activity in progress in every quarter. For months the Southern Pacific Company has been crowding the conversion of the Seventh and Webster street local steam lines into electric railways. Before the middle of next month, when the old steam franchise for the Seventh street railroad expires, the work of reconstructing the line will be completed and the trains will be operated by electricity. For several weeks past the train service on the Webster street line to the station at Fourteenth and Franklin streets has been operated by electricity, although only one track has been completed. The work of reconstruction has been greatly handicapped through the necessity for keeping the trains moving on schedule time.

The same corporation is crowding work on the new $300,000 depot at Sixteenth street, the foundation for which is now being laid. But it will be many months before that imposing structure will be finished, and the Berkeley and Oakland electric railways, in course of construction, will be centered there. These tremendous railway construction activities are specially noticed by visiting strangers and form the subject of favorable comment. They are accepted as indisputable evidences of Oakland's permanent prosperity. The remark is, in fact, on every observing visitor's tongue that if the directors of the corporation did not have an abiding faith in Oakland's future progress and prosperity they would never consent to the expenditure of the millions now being spent under their authorization for corporation betterments here.

GROWTH SURPRISED TAFT.
During his recent flying visit through Oakland President Taft marveled at the wonderful changes which had taken place here since his previous visit two years ago, and the big buildings whose construction is now in progress. The big Hotel Oakland, as well as the new City Hall, the H. C. Capwell building, the Security bank building and the commercial improvements being carried out by the municipality on the southern and western waterfronts were all objects of intense interest to him and drew from him expressions of the highest commendation of the enterprise and progressiveness of Oakland and its people.

BANK AND HOTEL.
This week the structural steel frame of the Security bank's seven-story building was finished. This frame will compose the reinforcement of the concrete walls, preparations for whose construction are now in progress. The building promises when finished to be one of the strongest and most substantial, as well as one of the handsomest structures erected in either of the bay cities. It marks the progress southward on Broadway of the line of tall modern fire and earthquake proof buildings which have completely altered the skyline of the eastern side of that thoroughfare during the past five years.

The red roof of the Hotel Oakland building is at present being laid. These tiles are a perfect reproduction of those employed by the builders of the old California mission church and have been constructed of the same durable material. The bright red color of the tile roof sets off the building handsomely.

BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE OF L. A. REDMAN, HILLSIDE AND MAGNOLIA AVENUES, PIEDMONT—L. M. Upton, Architect.

THE ESTATE OF LANDER A. REDMAN, ESQ.

The residence of L. A. Redman, a San Francisco attorney, recently completed on Hillside and Magnolia avenues, Piedmont, is an excellent example of the more pretentious suburban residences. A picture of it is herewith presented. The house sets well toward the center of the site, allowing a formal terraced garden at the front, while winding drives, the gardener's cottage, garage, pavilions and well-arranged plantings occupy the remaining portions. The estate comprises about two acres of sloping ground in one of the choicest locations of Piedmont. The Italian renaissance is the predominating style of architecture in both the formal garden, house and outbuildings. The exteriors are finished in gray plaster, painted and gilded with Monterey sand which gives a very pleasing effect. Red tile terraces, flowering urns and potted bay trees enliven the color scheme, which is mostly green and gray. The completeness of things as suggested by the outside is carried out in the interior which is finished with quarter-sawn oak, mahogany and French enamel, while the walls are enriched with brocades and other materials in harmonious tones. A splendid view is obtained of Oakland, the bay and surrounding territory from the principal rooms of the residence. Louis M. Upton is the architect.

to establish itself in the new warehouse district developing on Fourth street east of Franklin. Recently the wholesale commission house of Dodge, Sweeney & Co., now located at the corner of Twelfth and Harrison streets, bought a lot 50x100 on the north side of Fourth street, in the middle of the block, between Franklin and Webster streets. The lot carried two one-story cottages, which have been removed during the past week to make room for the erection thereon of a substantial business block. This change in ownership makes the Fourth street block in question on both sides of the thoroughfare practically a solid wholesale warehouse and commission merchant center.

RAILWAY STIMULATES BUILDING.
The prospect of the early completion of the Oakland and Antioch electric railway into this city has started building improvements on an extensive scale through the territory previously unsettled which is traversed by the route selected and which is in many respects one of the most picturesque of the unimproved sections within the boundaries of the city.

COUNTY RECORDS FOR PAST WEEK

The report of County Recorder Bacon for the week Thursday, October 19th, 1911, makes the following showing:

Number	Amount
Deeds recorded	223
Mortgages recorded	110
Release of mortgages	89
Deeds of trust recorded	21
Reconveyances recorded	55

The total number of instruments filed during the week was 478, the fees received from the same amounting to $1334.95. During the corresponding week last year 520 instruments were filed and the total revenue derived therefrom amounted to $1360.

VALUABLE CORNER LOT CHANGES OWNERSHIP

Deeds have been placed of record whereby the Talcott Land Co. conveys to Cedella M. Lowell, the lot on the southwest corner of Seventh and Webster streets, lot 100x100, with frame improvements. This was sold at a price of $68,000, and as Mrs. Lowell acquired this for an investment it establishes ground value in this district of over $600 per foot. The sale was made through the office of D. F. Minney. He also reports a sale of a pair of flats on Sixth street, between Oak and Fallon. While the terms were private, it is understood this was on a basis of $200 per foot.

PLEASURE SEEKERS OBTAIN FULL MEASURE IN OAKLAND

Theaters Present Best There Is in Drama, Comedy and Music, With Consequent Audiences of Thousands

The advancement which Oakland has made in depending upon herself for many things for which, for years, she had been in the habit of looking to San Francisco, is noticeable in many ways and, in a special manner in the matter of amusements. Now, thousands of San Franciscans come to Oakland and, especially to Idora Park, for entertainment day and evening.

It is but a few years, comparatively speaking, since it was the practice of the people of this city to depend almost entirely for theatrical entertainment on the city across the bay. There was a reason for that, at the time, because the theaters in this city were not of the kind, either in size or completeness, to warrant the large theatrical or operatic companies to stop over here and give performances. As a consequence, they went to San Francisco where they were assured a run, some times extending into weeks, and generally a certainty of remunerative business, especially when the show was possessed of merit and produced by competent performers.

EFFECT OF MACDONOUGH OPENING.
When the Macdonough Theater was opened to the public, there was misgiving on the part of some of the former theatrical managers of this city, that there would be no departure on the part of the managers of the larger (theatrical attractions, of taking their companies across the bay, compelling local amusements seekers to still pay tribute to the theaters on the other side.

But such was not the case. The management of the local house was able to book some of the finest attractions and play them to houses filled to the ceiling for two, three and in some instances, six and seven nights. In a short time, it became a by-word in the theatrical and musical profession that there was no town west of the Rockies in which the members preferred to play more than Oakland, for the reason, as they expressed it, that the audiences were not only large but were also intelligent, appreciative of music, tragedy and melodrama and, at the same time, critical.

SOCIAL TIES SUNDERING.
For various reasons, there has been a sundering of many of those social ties between the families in this and the larger city and the social and fashionable attractions which they afforded have become sadly impaired.

NEW TRAINS SOON TO BE RUNNING

Traction Company to Extend Its Line to Newest Addition to Berkeley.

BERKELEY, Oct. 21.—Official announcement by the Southern Pacific company that it intended to energize its new electric lines in this city November 1 has dispelled uncertainty among real estate dealers and others as to the definite time of the beginning of operations. It is expected that trains will begin to run on the Ellsworth street, Shattuck avenue, California and Ninth street lines immediately after the first of next month.

Work is progressing on the Spruce street, Euclid avenue, and Kensington Park extensions of the Oakland Traction lines, and it is believed that service on all of them will begin early in the winter. The extension of the Northbrae line, which was intended at first to reach only as far as Thousand Oaks, is to be carried on to the Kensington Park tract, a distance of one mile.

Building permits have been issued as follows:

- One-story one-room dwelling, Piedmont avenue, near Dwight way, for Mrs. Goodrich, $200.
- Two-story two-room dwelling, waterfront near Second street for Monarch Oil Refining Co., $500.
- One-story five-room dwelling, Harper street near Prince, for J. B. Fiege, $2000.
- Two-story 8-room dwelling, Shattuck avenue near Los Angeles avenue, for Annie White, $5000.

CLEARINGS OF LOCAL BANKS JUMP

Twenty-five Per Cent Increase Over Same Week of Last Year Shown Now.

News Is Flashed Over Country, Bringing Oakland to the Forefront.

The bank clearings of this city, for week ending Thursday last, amounted to $4,493,395.32. This is an increase of $826,602.96 over the clearings for the corresponding week of the year 1910, or about 25 per cent.

This is cheerful information to spread before the people of this city. It is a statement which will attract attention all over the country for the reason that, yesterday, it was sent through one of the commercial agencies in New York City to all the commercial centers of the United States and was then published in all the leading papers, coupled with the comment that the increase in the business of the city during the time specified, although there were only five working days in the week, amounted to about 25 per cent, for the reason that the clearings for the corresponding week of last year reached the total of only $3,666,602.96.

HOW ALL COULD HELP.
In this connection, it may be stated that the figures given for the past week, do not, in reality, represent the full volume of business done in this city during the period referred to. If every resident of this city at heart were to reflect for a moment as to what the meaning of bank clearings is, how they might advance the importance of his home city, and how easily he or she might add to those clearings and thus increase the showing, several millions more could be added to this weekly record and thus increase the importance of this city with no expense to the citizen, male or female.

This department of THE TRIBUNE has been making a consistent effort to show the importance of this city in this subject as also as to how they might aid in bringing about a radical change in the matter, so that Oakland could be advanced in the column of the great progressive cities of the west. A number of articles have been published on the subject, some of which have been written by well-known financiers of this city and, today, there is herewith presented an article which, in the simplest terms possible, explains all the elementary principles of the clearing house system, what it means, how it is conducted, how its transactions could be made to add several more millions weekly to the published report and, finally, how it is within the possibility of any person who is in receipt of money from any source whatever, making the showing one of the most encouraging in the country.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.
It is pleasing to know that the efforts of this department have attracted the attention of people who did not know formerly that it was in their power to aid in this work. They are now allied in the campaign in the matter of increasing the clearing-house showings henceforth. In this connection, there is herewith presented a comprehensive article from the pen of Golden Downing, president of Oakland Chapter, American Institute of Banking, which explains all about the bank clearings in so clear, practical and conclusive a manner that there is no youth of fifteen years who cannot understand it. There is no doubt that it will be read with the greatest interest, and the information which it will convey to the minds of many citizens who have been innocently working against their home city, will undoubtedly cause them to transact their business with local banks instead of doing it elsewhere to the detriment of their own city and the interest of the country.

NEW YORK HARBOR TO BE 'PLANTED'

Many Submarine Mines Will Be in Uncle Sam's Crop.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—New York harbor may be planted with submarine mines in case of an attack, which, it is believed, would render it absolutely impregnable. A fascinating test was carried out by the coast artillery last week in which floating targets were hauled by steam launches and blown up from shore. The mines consisted of 100 pounds of gun cotton each. The results were two "hits" out of three attempts.

The water was thrown into the air to a height of 200 feet, a column 25 feet in diameter. The mine was about ten feet under water. The targets were completely shattered. The mines were fired by a system of triangulation directed from Fort Wadsworth, three miles distant. The government experts were well satisfied with the tests.

METAL BLOCK BREAKS AND TIPS OVER PILE DRIVER

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—The breaking of a metal block on a state pile driver which was being used yesterday in repairing the Western Pacific slip, was responsible for the capsizing of the driver. An examination disclosed a serious flaw in the metal block and an effort will be made to collect from the firm that sold the block to the state the amount of damage caused by the breaking.

WOMAN IN RACE FOR MAYORALTY

Rural Mail Carrier Would Head Davenport in Washington.

SPOKANE, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Clara A. Wright, 25 years of age, wife of H. C. Wright, a rural mail carrier at Davenport, Wash., has entered the mayoralty race in that city. The primaries will take place November 7 and the election December 5. George E. Craig, county superintendent of schools, is the other candidate for mayor. His name will appear on the independent ticket in the primaries. There is no contest on either ticket.

Mrs. Wright was the first woman to file for office in Lincoln county since the state law for equal suffrage became effective. She is a native of Oregon, born at Eugene in 1882. She is the mother of three children. The oldest is 5 years of age, the youngest being a babe in arms.

Mrs. Wright is a staunch advocate of woman's suffrage and is not dismayed in the least by the troublesome experiences of the woman mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., saying: "I am a candidate on the citizens' ticket, and if elected I shall give the city Davenport a clean administration so far as it is possible for its mayor to direct."

STATEMENT MADE BY MAYOR ROLPH

Will Represent All the People All the Time and Improve Conditions.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—The following statement was issued this afternoon by Mayor-elect James Rolph, Jr.: To the People of San Francisco:

To satisfy many inquiries as to whether I will further participate in the campaign, I deem it proper, and, indeed, necessary, to define my position on this subject. By virtue of my election, I shall become the representative of all the people. It would be a mistake on my part, and certainly indicative of a lack of confidence in the people, to assume that the immense vote given me was, in any sense, a personal tribute. It was merely an expression of confidence in the people, and I feel it my duty to represent them in the most efficient manner possible, including the preparation of the city for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, which event means so much for San Francisco and all the West. In this work our people must be united.

It would be improper for me to use the influence that necessarily results from my position as mayor-elect to assume to dictate to the electors how they shall vote. I was elected mayor, not to divide the people. The issues and the candidates are before you, and it is for you to decide. However, I wish to urge the importance of the coming election. That cannot be overestimated. At the primary will surely go to the polls on November 7 and cast their votes in person. I am sure that all who are sympathetic with my aims and purposes, by so doing they will insure the election of officers who, acting in harmony with me, will constitute the kind of administration the people must have intended to lead. Respectfully, JAMES ROLPH, JR.

SUFFRAGISTS SEEK NEW STATES TO CONQUER

Communities Without Fold to Be Scene of Proselyting Campaign.

PLANS FOR BATTLE ARE WELL ADVANCED

Votes for Women Banner Will Be Planted in Heart of Antis' Camp.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 21.—Having taken stock of those parts of the country where the woman's era at the polls has dawned, delegates to the Forty-third annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association today turned to sections where they think the chances are favorable for equal suffrage. Presidents of State woman's suffrage organizations which are beginning serious campaigns for the franchise had their meeting today.

"The next great transition that is destined to sweep the country will be the political emancipation of women," is the opinion of Omar E. Garwood of Denver, who addressed the convention. Mr. Garwood told of conditions in Colorado during the eighteen years that equal suffrage has been practiced there, and declared that woman's interests in matters political and resulted in placing the state among the leaders of progressive commonwealths. He said:

LAWS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

"Complaint has been made that the women of Colorado have made a poor showing in procuring laws relating to children, yet the members of the inter-parliamentary union who made careful personal study of children's laws in all parts of America, said that Colorado has the sanest, most humane, most progressive and most scientific laws relating to children to be found on any statute books in the world."

"The strongest men in Colorado believe in equal suffrage. It is ridiculous to claim that there is any relation between equal suffrage and divorce in Colorado. Judges and lawyers all agree that no divorce case has ever arisen in Colorado which could be traced in the remotest way to the existence of equal suffrage."

CREDIT TO STATE.

"Women who have held office in Colorado have done so with great credit to themselves. There has never arisen a single instance where a Colorado woman officer holder has been accused of any irregularity, much less corruption, in the administration of her office. As officeholders and as voters, women acquit themselves more creditably than do the men."

Women are shown every respect at the polls, and as a prominent Coloradan said: "I would feel less anxiety in seeing my wife or daughter in the worst polling place in Denver on election day than to see her on Broadway in certain portions of the theatrical district in New York after 10 p. m."

"The men who are in charge of great political movements in Colorado realize that the women vote must always be reckoned with and no political administration dares to flout a known rascal's name in the face of the women."

"Equal suffrage will always exist in this State. It is right in principle and successfully practiced, and is bound to become universal in America."

POTATO SORTER IS HEIR TO $75,000

Alfred Bartram in Search of Local Color, Finds It Is Gold.

SPOKANE, Oct. 21.—While sorting potatoes in a warehouse at North Yakima, Wash., Alfred Ernest Bartram, a licensed physician of Colorado, received word that he is heir to a fortune of $75,000 and will immediately return to his old home to establish his claim.

Bartram has been tramping in the northwestern states and provinces since 1906, also touring Japan and China after the fashion of American "hoboes" to gather material for a book. He went to the Yakima valley at the beginning of the harvest season and helped carry for the hay crop on the Indian reservation, afterward engaging as a potato sorter.

He is highly educated, a graduate of several prominent English colleges and universities, and has traveled extensively in Europe and America. While at work in the hay fields he never talked of his past nor of his connection with one of the first families in Colchester, but made it plain that he is not a remittance man and left England of his own volition to make a study of America.

ANTI-ROLLING TANKS CONQUER SEASICKNESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Marine engineers have examined with great curiosity this week the Frahm anti-rolling tanks aboard the steamship Victoria Louise, just arrived from Europe. It is observed that the device takes up less space than was expected and their operation in no way interferes with the ship. The two tanks are placed well below the promenade deck, the action of the water in the tanks in a high sea is controlled by regulating the movement of the air in the side branches by air locks between the upper ends of the tanks. The success of the tank in holding the deck in a horizontal position in the roughest weather and doing away with seasickness, will doubtless lead to their being generally adopted on passenger ships.

ARRESTED FOR ATTACK WITH DANGEROUS KNIFE

Joseph Sims, a negro, was arrested by Inspector of Police William Kyle at an early hour yesterday within thirty minutes after Sims had attacked F. Robinson, a negro porter, with a sharp knife. Sims is charged with assault with a deadly weapon, a felony charge, and will be given preliminary hearing before Judge George Samuels. Robinson was not wounded in the affray, which was over a woman, but his clothes were cut to ribbons. The cutting occurred at the rooms of the two men at 855 Madison street.

WHALES ABOUND IN SOUTHERN WATERS

Norwegian Capital Brought to Gulf of Mexico for New Industry.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—Some time ago it was announced that whaling was declared to be a future profitable venture in the Gulf of Mexico and that a Norwegian whaling fleet would attempt the work. However, the story of whales in the gulf in Norway, where capital was sought to further the work.

However, it has just come to light that great profits are being derived from whaling in the Gulf of Mexico. The new company put out a fleet of whaling ships, and the venture proved more successful than even the stories of Larson, predicted. OFFICIAL SAYS WAGE SCHEDULE IS THE SAME

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Vice-President F. O. Melcher of the Rock Island lines declared that the new wage schedule offered the shopmen, who are taking a strike vote, would not affect the earning power of the men.

"It has been stated that in the schedule presented to the shopmen's committee the overtime was abolished," he said. "This is untrue. Our scale is the same as the old one. The committee demanded the acceptance of its schedule, which called for an increase of 10 per cent, but we did not give it any serious consideration and its members went back to Kansas City without any definite agreement."
